

New York City Area Bears Brunt of Pollution from Aerial Waste

By JERRY BUCK
NEW YORK (AP)—Across the vast metropolitan area smoke and fumes pour from factories, incinerators, generating plants and automobiles until the air is laced with gases. The air pollution is usually visible—sometimes to such an extent that little else is. Eyes smart, throats burn, chests hurt and mental depression overtakes the unsuspecting. In this crowded megalopolis where every shift of an elbow finds a rib, smoke belching from a factory chimney in New Jersey may be breathed before the day is over by people downwind in New York or Connecticut. Swept by the prevailing westerlies, polluted air fans out in a dirty gray blanket that experts say is endangering the health and mental well-being of more than 15 million people in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut. During the past two weeks at an interstate conference on air pollution abatement, these experts unveiled a panorama of unpleasant facts, harsh statistics and dire warnings. Among them: — The amount of sulphur dioxide in the air is "the worst, the most critical, in the United States." — Carbon monoxide levels in heavy traffic areas "bordered on those that cause impairment of mental processes." — The respiratory cancer rate in a heavily polluted area of Staten Island is higher than in other parts of the island. — Air pollution costs every person in the 17-county metropolitan area $200 a year, or a total of $3 billion. — It may become necessary to use nuclear explosions to drill for natural gas, a fuel which gives off little pollution. New York City is the chief victim of the air pollution — and one of the major contributors. Major John V. Lindsay's task force on air pollution reported last Monday that the city is subjected annually to 1,536,000 tons of carbon monoxide, 597,000 tons of sulphur dioxide, 280,000 tons of particulate matter — such as soot, 298,000 tons of nitrogen oxides and 567,000 tons of hydrocarbons. The two-week hearing renewed the border warfare between New York and New Jersey over who is polluting whose air.

Alexander Rihm Jr., executive secretary of the New York Air Pollution Control Board, charged that a small, industrialized section of New Jersey opposite Staten Island was responsible for almost 25 per cent of the sulphur dioxide in the metropolitan area. His counterpart in New Jersey, Louis A. Winkelman, accused New York officials with hitting "frequently below the belt." Much of the criticism at the conference was aimed at the Consolidated Edison Co., whose electric-generating plants were called by Rep. Theodore Kufnerman, R.N.Y., the "largest single producer of foul air in the City of New York."

WEATHER
Skies will be partially clearing today but the temperatures will still remain on the cool side. There is a chance of snow flurries as the high will be between 25 and 30. It will be partially cloudy and cool tonight with a low of 20. Those clouds are going to hang around tomorrow too as the temperatures will rise slightly. High for tomorrow will be in the low 30's. There is a 40 per cent probability of snow or rain tomorrow and only a 20 per cent chance today. Winds are currently out of the south at 10 to 20 mph. The high temperature for Saturday was 42 as compared to a 36 yesterday. No precipitation fell Saturday and only a trace was recorded yesterday. The river is presently at 2.6 feet and remaining steady. Sunrise will be at 7:25 a.m. and sunset will be at 5:05 p.m.

WARREN COUNTY
Army engineers visited the upper reaches of the Allegheny Reservoir and the Kinzua Dam last week and focused their attention on improvements on the river itself from Warren upstream. The engineers said they are "sympathetic" to the construction of an inflatable rubber dam in the Olean area. Page B-1.

At the same time, it was announced that a study of the Allegheny River Valley is coming to an end. The study encompasses 100 miles from Kinzua Dam downstream. The study concentrated on conservation procedures. Page B-1.

Apparently not all area school administrators are agreed on the state's proposed intermediate unit plan. Voicing disapproval in the wake of Warren County's endorsement was Olan S. Flickner of Venango County, who said the northwestern Pennsylvania unit was too small to be practical. Page B-1.

PENNSYLVANIA
Raymond Shafer will be inaugurated tomorrow with the usual pomp and ceremony that goes with the office of governor. The legislature in the meantime will begin to consider his plan to update the state's Constitution. The first of the caucuses will be held today. Page One.

THE NATION
The second week of the Bobby Baker trial will begin in Washington today when his counsel will try to persuade the court to dismiss the indictment on grounds of violation of constitutional rights. The defense contends the government obtained its evidence by "bugging" a conversation between Baker and a key witness.

The Rev. Martin Luther King has learned after a year that his efforts to register voters in the Chicago area has encountered resistance from City Hall. Another major obstacle; mass apathy in the Negro slums.

THE WORLD
Secretary General Thant cabled urgent appeals to both Syria and Israel in an attempt to prevent what he called the danger of a large scale clash of military forces on the border between the two countries. Thant asked each side to restrain their forces and to accept a proposal for an emergency meeting of the Israel-Syria mixed armistice commission. He also notified the nations that he had advised reinforcement of the number of U.N. military observers in the area.

Acting on information provided by a Viet Cong defector, a helicopter-borne company of U.S. Marines attacked a Viet Cong cadre meeting, killing 61 of the enemy while suffering moderate casualties.

SPORTS
Green Bay quarterback Bart Starr hit substitute end Max McGee with two touchdown passes, Elijah Pitts scored a pair on the ground and Jim Taylor rambled for another score as the Packers whipped Kansas City, 35-10 in the first Super Bowl yesterday. Holding a 14-10 lead at halftime, the NFL champions completely dominated the game in the last two periods. Page A5.

Paul Johnston hit for 28 points and Gary Holcomb canned 27 as the Edinboro Off-Campus cagers defeated Venango, 85-71 Saturday night. It was the third victory for the local college team against four setbacks. Page A5.

Led by Lew Alcindor, UCLA continued to roll in college basketball, but the Kentucky Wildcats, once a power on the courts, were tripped up again, virtually eliminating them from contention for another national crown over the weekend. Page A6.

Shafer's Inaugural Tomorrow

HARRISBURG (AP) — The election of a new Republican state chairman to be followed by a $100-a-plate "Shafer Victory Dinner" will highlight inauguration-eve activities in Harrisburg today.

This will set the tone for tomorrow's inauguration of Lt. Gov. Raymond P. Shafer as governor of Pennsylvania. Today's dinner, and tomorrow's oath-taking and Inauguration Ball will take place in Harrisburg's vast Farm Show Building which last week was the site of the annual State Farm Show.

The 126-member Republican State Committee is slated to meet in a downtown hotel at 2 p.m., EST, to elect a successor to Chairman Craig Truax who has been appointed by Shafer as secretary of the commonwealth. Shafer said last week that he "would be very happy" if the committee were to elect New Castle Mayor John C. Jordan as the next GOP chairman.

There are no other announced candidates for the post and the committee traditionally abides by a governor-elect's selection. Then at 5 p.m. the doors to the vast Farm Show Building will swing open to Republican party faithful for the "Victory Dinner" sponsored by the Republican Finance Committee of Pennsylvania.

Guest speaker will be freshman U. S. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Illinois. Percy is one of several being discussed as a possible Republican presidential nominee for 1968. Shafer and the man he will succeed, Gov. Scranton, also are scheduled to appear at the dinner.

Israel, Syria Clash Again; War Threatened

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Syrians and Israelis exchanged fire yesterday on the Sea of Galilee and U.N. Secretary-General U Thant said the buildup of military forces on their border threatened to touch off a large scale clash "at any moment."

The exchange of fire came as pressure mounted in Israel for Prime Minister Levi Eshkol's government to take strong retaliatory action against Syria, blamed by Israel for the border incidents.

An army spokesman said Syrian positions along the Sea of Galilee opened fire on an Israeli fishing boat and that the Israeli side returned the fire. He made no mention of casualties.

MILLIONS AFFECTED

Philadelphia Braces For Transit Strike

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — City and police officials rushed to set up emergency procedures yesterday to cope with today's rush hour traffic, expected to reach huge proportions because of a strike against the city's mass transit system.

Five thousand drivers, maintenance workers and cashiers — all members of the Transport Workers Union, struck the Philadelphia Transportation Co. just after midnight Saturday, tying up virtually all buses, trolleys and subways.

The transit firm usually carries about one million passengers a day in Philadelphia, the nation's fourth-largest city.

An official at the city's strike emergency headquarters said calls coming into his office are expected to reach flood level by today when the full effect of the strike is felt.

The strike emergency headquarters provides information on parking lots opened for the strike, commuter railroad schedules, school bus information and truck routes to pick up city employees.

National Economy Inflated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy produced a record $739.5 billion in goods and services last year, the Commerce Department reported last night.

This is well above estimates made by the Johnson administration last January.

Gross national product — the value of all goods and services produced in the economy — increased by a record $58.3 billion for 1966, up 8.5 per cent from the previous year, the department added.

About 36 per cent of the increase stemmed from inflation. The department's figures are preliminary and subject to change next month but they go far beyond the $722 billion — give or take $5 billion — projected in President Johnson's economic report last January.

The economic report scheduled to be submitted to Congress next week is expected to predict a GNP of about $785 billion to $790 billion for this year.

enforce parking regulations to keep streets open and traffic flowing.

Other transit services — commuter railroads operated by the Reading and Pennsylvania Railroads, taxi companies and a few suburban transit bus and trolley lines — planned increased service to help. City officials asked drivers to form car pools and give stranded commuters a lift.

The state Public Utility Commission has lifted restrictions on taxi companies to allow them to carry more than one fare at a time.

The strike is the fifth in seventeen years against the transit company. The last strike was a 19-day walkout in 1963. The current one began as union and management negotiators sat in separate hotel suites, unwilling to meet face to face.

Still stalemated yesterday over wages and fringe benefits are the company and union negotiators and state and federal mediators who tried to avert the walkout. No new joint talks have been scheduled.

Johnson's Foreign Aid Plan Faces Tough Fight

By FELIX BELAIR JR.

(C) N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — President Johnson is expected to ask Congress in his budget message later this month for about $3.2 billion to finance economic and military foreign aid in the fiscal year beginning next July 1. The amount would be under the $3.39 billion he requested a year ago but significantly more than the $2.94 billion actually appropriated by Congress. For this reason, among others, the request is expected to encounter determined opposition in the Senate and House.

The President's request for the new year would include nearly $2.5 billion for economic development loans, technical assistance and other grants. This is about the same amount as the president requested for the current fiscal year but substantially more than the $2.14 billion approved in the final appropriation.

For military assistance programs the President is expected to ask for about $700 million. This compares with last year's asking figure of $917 million and an actual appropriation of $790 million. But this reduction would reflect the transfer of military aid to Laos and Vietnam to the regular defense budget.

Military aid to Vietnam was shifted to the defense appropriation for the first time last year when it was running about $630 million annually. The amount currently going to Laos is a classified figure but is believed to exceed $100 million.

The president's new request would be presented in the usual context of a "tight budget" that reflects the mounting cost of the Vietnam war and of various domestic programs.

However, any Administration request for more foreign aid money than was provided for the current period faces virtually inevitable cuts in both legislative branches. The economic aid program has come under increasingly heavy fire in the Senate in the past several years and has been sustained in the House by increasingly narrow voting margins.

The larger Republican membership in the Senate and a revived coalition of Republicans and southern Democrats in the House where they constitute a working majority adds up to the gloomiest congressional outlook for foreign aid in many years.

Most House Republicans traditionally have taken a dim view of economic aid programs. So have southern Democrats, among whom the notion is prevalent that helping the industrial development of less developed countries only means unwelcome competition for new industries in their districts.

The attitude among the House Democratic leadership was voiced recently by Rep. George Mahon of Texas, chairman of the house appropriations committee. He forecast a "skeptical reevaluation" of the entire economic foreign aid program and added:

"Much of the foreign aid program is essential. But, providing aid to so many countries (currently about 72) that's where the trouble lies."

The appropriations chairman questioned whether the U.S. could afford, at a time of heavy financial involvement in Vietnam, to continue its current investment of $510 million annually in the alliance for progress with Latin American countries.

"And I don't know how long this country will be willing to keep on feeding India to the extent we're now doing," Mahon said. "It's a noble purpose, but can we afford it?"

U.S. Financiers Outline Communist Trade Plans

By ROBERT E. BEDINGFIELD

(C) N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK—An alliance of family fortunes linking Wall Street and the American Midwest is going to try to build economic bridges between the free world and Communist Europe.

The International Basic Economy Corporation, controlled by Cyrus S. Eaton Jr., Cleveland financier, plan to cooperate in promoting trade between the Iron Curtain countries, including the Soviet Union, and the United States, Canada and Latin America.

The IBEC was organized in 1947 under the principal direction of Nelson A. Rockefeller, now New York's governor. It was organized as an investment company specializing in enterprises in underdeveloped nations. The company already has interests in 29 foreign countries, but more of it is in the Communist bloc.

Tower International is a wholly owned subsidiary of Tower Industries, a partnership Eaton created in Cleveland in 1964 with his sister's husband, Dr. Fay A. LeFevre, and other Cleveland associates. Tower International has specialized in promoting and arranging the financing of projects in Eastern Europe.

The company is building a 600-room luxury hotel in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. Last month it arranged the financing for a $6 million hotel in Budapest, which will be part of the International Hotels group. Hotels in Warsaw, Prague, Sofia and Bucharest are in various stages of planning or negotiation.

The joint effort contemplated by the International Basic Economy and Tower is seen as combining the investment skills and resources of the Rockefeller and the special entree to Soviet-bloc officialdom that Tower enjoys, largely as a result of contacts cultivated over the last 15 years by Cyrus S. Eaton Sr.

The elder Eaton has been an outspoken advocate of closer ties between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. He has backed his convictions by visiting Russia and entertaining Soviet leaders—including former Premier Khrushchev.

In an interview last week, Cyrus S. Eaton Jr., the son, described the arrangement between the IBEC and Tower as "headed toward a 50-50 partnership." He said that, from now on, Tower would offer International Basic Economy a 50 per cent interest in any deal it undertook. This includes the projects in which Tower is already involved, including the Budapest and Belgrade hotels, which are under construction.

In confirming the arrangement with Tower, Richard S. Aldrich, a vice president and director of the IBEC, said yesterday that his organization's "objective is to improve the standard of living of the people of the world."

"An initiative that creates a commercial and industrial dialogue between the east and west cannot help but contribute to

OPEN DOOR FOR TRADING

Soviets Advertise For U.S. Business

By HARRY SCHWARTZ

(C) N. Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — A two-page Soviet advertisement in the New York Times this morning is hailed by some observers as the most positive Moscow response yet received to President Johnson's effort to build a trade bridge to the Soviet Union.

Specialists could recall no precedent since World War II for the advertisement, which calls American businessmen's attention to opportunities for trade with the Soviet Union and invites them to advertise in Soviet newspapers, magazines, radio, television and other media. Previous Soviet advertising in the United States has concentrated on appeals for American tourists.

The Soviet advertisement stresses the claim that ideological differences are no barrier to that country's trade and as-ures American businessmen that Soviet foreign trade organizations "are also ready to strike up relations anew."

It tells them that if they advertise in Soviet publications and show patience "your patience will be, as a rule, abundantly compensated by the volume of the order."

The eagerness for expanding trade and advertising relations with American business indicated by the advertisement, some observers noted, contrasts with the coolness Soviet media showed last year to President Johnson's repeated calls for expanded Soviet — U. S. trade.

The Soviet ad emphasizes that advertising is particularly effective in the Soviet Union because Soviet readers and listeners are not yet "tired of advertising" as are "their colleagues in the west who are literally flooded with it."

Enemy Death Toll Rises In Iron Triangle Drive

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

SAIGON, South Vietnam (AP)

— The U. S.-led drive through the Communists' Iron Triangle entered its second week yesterday with enemy losses reported by allied spokesmen at nearly 600 men.

South Vietnamese infantrymen in the operation clashed with the Viet Cong for the first time.

U.S. military headquarters reported that the big push through the jungles and scrub 20 to 30 miles north of Saigon also has yielded a record haul of enemy rice — nearly 2,000 tons. In the upper provinces of South Vietnam, U.S. Marines reported killing 87 Communists in three actions. One was a helicopter-lifted Marine raid against a fortified enemy hamlet in which a company of Marines suffered moderate casualties but reported counting 61 dead Viet Cong. U.S. jet pilots supporting the Marines reported another 75 probable kills in air attacks. The over-all enemy toll may be 200, a Marine officer reported.

Near Saigon, units of the newly arrived U.S. 9th Infantry Division were in action for the first time. The U.S. Command disclosed that the division's 3rd

Five Area Traffic Accidents Investigated by Law Officers

Five traffic accidents occurred in the Warren area during the weekend. No injuries were reported.

At 1:45 a.m. Saturday a logging truck being operated by Dale Skinner, 61, of R. D. 3, Sugar Grove went off Route 957 near the Pittsburgh inn and struck a parked car owned by Thomas M. Beck, 22, of R. D. 3, Sugar Grove.

The impact of the collision forced the Beck car into another parked car owned by Allison L. Applebee, 26, of Route 1, Clymer, N. Y.

The driver of the truck said he was distracted by an oncoming vehicle with only one headlight. He cut the wheels to the right and struck the Beck car.

State trooper Max J. Bizzak of Warren substation estimated damage to the truck at $1,000, with $500 damage to the Beck auto and $200 to the Applebee car.

A car being driven by Donald Carl Thomas, 18, of 309 Main st., Tidoute failed to negotiate a curve and went off Route 62 about three miles north of Tidoute.

It struck a guard rail, slid back onto the highway, went back off the highway and struck five more guard rails, finally ending up partly on its side, according to state trooper Gary L. Rain of Warren substation. Damage was estimated at $800.

Senators, Old and New, Debate Vietnam Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recommendations for more war in Vietnam, for less war and for changed war came from old and new senators yesterday along with an expressed doubt that the administration is properly prepared to talk peace.

Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., was the one who urged that the United States "bear down" much harder to win in Vietnam, even at the risk of war with Red China and the Soviet Union.

A forum of five freshmen Republican senators split over the bombing issue.

Sen. Charles Percy of Illinois, Howard Baker Jr. of Tennessee, and Cliff Hansen of Wyoming agreed that any cessation would be a dangerous mistake without balancing concessions from the enemy.

But Sen. Edward Brooke of Massachusetts said the bombing policy should be re-evaluated while Sen. Mark Hatfield of Or-regon said the bombing has been unsuccessful "So I ask the question why continue it?"

Meanwhile, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen, the Senate Republican leader from Illinois, questioned whether the Johnson administration is properly prepared for an end to the fighting.

In his hard-line talk, Long emphasized that his position as assistant Senate Democratic leader does not make him a party spokesman on policy matters and said he spoke only for himself.

Interviewed on the CBS television-radio program "Face The Nation", Long said:

"I am one of those who favor bearing down to win that war. ...Americans are just not adjusted to thinking in terms of going along and pulling your punches and doing less than you could be doing with a war that keeps killing American boys and keeps dragging on and on.

They want to get it over with... "You want to bear down on this bombing (of North Vietnam) and hit them a lot harder than you're hitting and quit worrying whether the Communists like it or not."

Long indicated he favors "bearing down" by bombing North Vietnam's airfields and harbor installations in Haiphong, and mining the Haiphong Harbor.

"If that brought Red China into the war..." came the next question.

"I would step up my effort and fight them too," Long answered.

"And the same with the Soviet Union?" an interviewer prompted.

"Yes, that's right," said Long.

Asked about the chance that such a development "could be triggering a third world war, a nuclear war," Long said:

"...you've been taking a lot of risks in this dangerous world we live in, but it's best for them to know that while we're not threatening them, we're going to stand firm and we're going to do whatever is necessary to prevail in this case."

Dirksen said his main concern now is what American policy would be if there were a cessation in the fighting and negotiations began.

ON SAME SPOT AS CONFEDERACY INAUGURAL

Lurleen Wallace Inauguration Today

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Mrs. George C. Wallace succeeds her husband as governor today in a state where the sight of a woman officeholder is fast becoming more the rule than the exception.

In midafternoon at the conclusion of a five-hour inaugural parade, the 40-year-old mother of four children will take the oath as the first woman governor in Alabama and the third in the nation.

She will stand on a bronze star at the top of the Capitol steps marking the spot where Jefferson Davis was inaugurated as president of the Confederacy at the start of the Civil War 106 years ago.

Her hand will rest on the Bible Davis used on that historic day. Beneath it will be her family Bible. Both will be opened to the same passage — John 3:16.

In her $25,000 a year job as head of the state government, the blonde Mrs. Wallace will join five other women chosen with her last November, or earlier, to occupy elective state offices.

They include State Auditor Melba Till Allen, State Treasurer Agnes Baggett, Secretary of State Mabel Amos, Commissioner Sibyl Pool of the Public Service Commission, and Presiding Judge Annie Lola Price of the State Court of Appeals.

So accustomed has Alabama grown to women officeholders in the past 20 years that no man has ever been elected to state office when a woman ran against him.

The incoming governor was pledged in advance to carry on her husband's struggle against what she described in her campaign last year as the "trends which, if left unchecked, will destroy the free enterprise system, property ownership, and individual liberty and freedom."

She referred to the favorite Wallace target — centralized government control.

An estimated 100,000 visitors are expected to jam the streets along the inaugural parade route. Hotel and motel accommodations in Montgomery have been sold out for weeks. All available city, county and state police have been ordered on duty to handle the crowds.

Sidewalks leading up Dexter Avenue to the Capitol are lined with red, white and blue bunting with the words "Stand up for Alabama," which symbolize outgoing Gov. Wallace's states rights campaign.

Technically, he will remain in office until midnight today, then stay on at the Capitol to become his wife's $1 a year No.

1 adviser. Before the year is over, however, he may have become an active candidate for president.

Mrs. Wallace, as one of her first official acts, will address the state legislature tomorrow. Wallace told The Associated Press in an interview Saturday that the odds were "better than even" that he will run for president in 1968.

Despite the pomp and pageantry of today's inauguration, there is a grim note of urgency. The parade — which will include 195 school bands, 90 floats and 10 marching units — has been dedicated to the fighting men in Vietnam. In deference to them and their sacrifice, Mrs. Wallace and her husband have canceled the traditional inaugural ball.

Outdoor Bureau Recommends Scenic Trails

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Appalachian Trail, which winds through Eastern Pennsylvania on its way from Maine to Georgia, has been recommended for immediate status as a national scenic trail.

The historic Indian footpath topped the list of "national trails" proposed in a report compiled by the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation which was made public over the weekend.

Other trails extending into Pennsylvania have also been proposed in the report, including an extension of the proposed Potomac Heritage Trail northward to Johnstown, Pa.

The main trail would extend along the Potomac River Basin through Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

"Another trail" is proposed around the Great Lakes.

War Grows Closer To Us

Vietnam seems just a little closer to Warren today.

Spec. 4 Larry Clarence Haylett, a Grand Valley area boy, was killed there last week.

He is the first Warren County youth to make the supreme sacrifice that the Vietnamese might be free, with the right to choose their own destiny without Communist subjugation. And in fighting for the freedom of the Vietnamese, he also fought for us that we, too, may not face a similar fate.

And he died half way around the world from his family, in a jungle or swamp probably farther away than he likely would have ever been had he lived an average life.

Larry was only 20 years old. He attended the Dempseytown elementary schools and Oil City High School where he graduated in 1964.

Ironically, his brother, Danny, received a letter from him 24 hours after the death message from the War Department, that stated "I'll be seeing you sooner than you think."

DREW PEARSON

Democrats Leaned Backwards

WASHINGTON—The House Democratic caucus was grim when it met behind closed doors to discipline Rep. Adam Clayton Powell.

About the only light moment in the tense 35 minutes of discussion was when Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee which probed Powell, referred to his own travels at taxpayer expense.

"Though Adam Clayton Powell and his associates did far too much junking, some of it under falsified circumstances, I myself got a great deal of publicity some time back by taking Ernie Petinaud, the head waiter in the House restaurant, on a trip to Europe," said Hays.

"Let me say that Ernie Petinaud was a lot better ambassador for the country than many members of Congress, probably better than me. I'd be glad to take him again. It's sometimes difficult to determine whether foreign travel is worthwhile or not.

"In my own subcommittee's investigation of Powell's behavior, it was not very pleasant to see witnesses torn between loyalty to their chairman, Mr. Powell, and the possible penalty of perjury. They squirmed. Though the record wasn't very complimentary to Mr. Powell, I won't vote to unseat him in the House tomorrow, and I don't think we should deny him his chairmanship in this caucus without hearing him testify in his own behalf, which he refused to do during our brief investigation."

Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., had led off with the motion that was finally adopted—to make Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., the committee chairman and to leave Powell's seniority, or standing, on the Education and Labor group up to Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee.

"I'm getting tired answering all this criticism in the newspapers and from my own constituents, intimating that we are a bunch of crooks because we don't throw out Adam Clayton Powell," declared Udall. "But I think we have a responsibility to discipline him here by taking away his chairmanship, even though I shall vote to seat him as a member of the House tomorrow."

Rep. Abraham Multer of Brooklyn, acting for Speaker John McCormack, then moved a substitute motion to temporarily remove Powell as committee chairman, pending a probe.

SYLVIA PORTER

Johnson's 'Bargain'

Now that the President finally has ended his tantalizing version of "Does She or Doesn't She" by saying "I DO" and has asked Congress for a modest income tax increase to become effective July 1, the question that must be kept in sharpest focus is "WHY?"

The honest answer that must not be obscured in the developing squabble is: To "buy" easier and cheaper money right away for us—"us" ranging from homebuilders and homebuyers to big and small businessmen to ordinary families the nation over.

As might have been expected, Johnson tied the income tax request to "the unusual expenditures associated with our efforts in Vietnam." If Congress does vote the 6 per cent surcharge on our taxable incomes—which is far from sure—it will be because Congress feels it must demonstrate equal "fiscal responsibility."

But with the pace of economic rise slowing, Johnson wouldn't dare to risk adding to restraints

How tragic! They'll be receiving his body.

As General William Tecumseh Sherman said, "war is hell." And hell it is—its fury, its horror, its tragedy, hardly recognized until its true impact is driven home by these grim and sad war messages.

Larry Haylett has given his all. It should stir all of us to the realization that we are at war, that additional tragedies may be expected, and that it rests with us to do all we can to bring an end to this conflict.

Larry left home and family, and has done more than his share. Let us not shirk in our responsibility whatever it is and whenever it faces us. We owe this much to this Grand Valley area youth.

And to his parents, brothers and sisters go the sympathy of residents of the county and the entire area. He has paid dearly for his peace—that others might have at least a share on this earth.

"What greater love hath a man..."

"If we were the jury, and a judge was charging us, we'd have to decide on the evidence, beyond all reasonable doubt," he declared. "There has been a shocking lack of due process in this case, because a man is being tried, convicted and punished without his day in court."

Powell nervously shuffled papers and smoked a tipped cigar. Once he got up during Multer's defense to remind his fellow Democrats of his "great legislative record as chairman." He referred to a letter from President Johnson complimenting him on passing various educational and social welfare measures in 1964-65, a record which this column also lauded.

Adam didn't try to defend his travel excesses. He simply said: "I can't do all this from now on, because of the new rules adopted by my committee. If some of you are prejudiced by the civil action against me in New York, let me say that the state appellate court has not rendered a final decision on this. I'll appeal all the way to the Supreme Court if I have to."

"If you approve the Udall motion, you will be acting against me before the courts have finally ruled in this civil case."

The Democrats, however, rejected the Multer compromise by 122 to 88, then, by a thunderous voice vote, approved the Udall motion to take away the chairmanship.

"They didn't offer me a seat either, Adam..."

JOSEPH ALSOP

Good News, For Once

WASHINGTON—The President's message on the State of the Union was very good news for two quite different though linked reasons.

It was good news, first of all, because of the indications the speech so clearly gave of the state of the President. Here is a man who has gone in less than two years from a daily diet of intoxicating and excessive adulation to a daily diet of shrill and excessive vilification. Most men would be a bit rattled, to put it mildly, by this kind of change of surface fortune.

This speech showed that the President is anything but rattled. No doubt he is more withdrawn and more likely to be drawn like a bear with a sore paw about minor matters. But his speech, the most candid and least phony-plous he has ever delivered, was the utterance of a man with the calmness and courage needed to follow through on all those courses he holds to be wise and needed.

It is reassuring that the President has not let himself be rattled. And it is reassuring, too, that he has refused to be pressured into changing his course, either on Vietnam or the Great Society. He has to resist very powerful pressures indeed.

On Vietnam, an immense campaign was mounted to persuade the President to announce another bombing pause. The United Nations lobby inside the administration, U.N. Secretary General U Thant, various foreign governments and the whole silly-solemn segment of American intellectual life joined together in this effort.

It was conducted on many levels, in public and in private. It was aided by this administration's ludicrous image-consciousness, currently much inflamed by the strange decision of a great newspaper to allow a reporter to visit an enemy capital when the enemy's invitation was proffered with the sole purpose of using the reporter to transmit enemy propaganda.

Nonetheless, this effort to get the President to do a foolish thing for public relations purposes was firmly resisted. With equal firmness the President also resisted the even more formidable pressure, mainly from key Democratic members of the House and Senate, to bring his Great Society programs to a screeching halt by deep cuts in their appropriations.

The motive for the proposed 6 per cent surtax on incomes and corporate profits was not to pay for the war in Vietnam. It was, rather, to conserve the Great Society programs. Because of the existing slowdown in the economy, there are plenty of Presidential advisers who hold that we can safely afford the kind of budget deficit that will result if taxes are not increased. Their opinions, beyond doubt, were sweet to hear, and the President, beyond doubt, was to refrain from asking for higher taxes.

The contrary opinions that did most to carry the day for higher taxes came from the White House corps of legislative liaison men. They pointed out that a projected budget deficit above $10 billion would touch off a national spasm of insensate howling about "spending" and "fiscal irresponsibility."

They predicted further that in such an atmosphere no power on earth could prevent the Republican-Dixiecrat coalition from cutting the President's social programs to the very bone. Thus, the tax rise was decided upon not only as desirable in itself, as the Treasury insisted, but also to give the social programs a better chance in a difficult Congress.

If this were a less self-indulgent country, of course, we should be thinking about something much bigger than a mere temporary surtax of 6 per cent. By any rational test this country is rich enough to go further than paying for the Vietnamese war and funding the President's existing programs at a reasonable level. We should clearly be expanding the more worthwhile existing programs, such as aid to elementary and primary education, and we should be making a titanic effort to deal with the cancer in the cities before it is too late.

If the word is properly understood, this is the "conservative" thing to do, and it would still be conservative if doing it required striking down the tax exemptions of every millionaire crack-brain who falsely claims the honorable title of conservative.

But as anyone can see from the first House vote on the Rules, the new Congress is in no mood for bold new departures, however urgently they may be needed. The President is wise, therefore, to have refrained from breaking much new ground.

LBJ and the Age of Reform

WASHINGTON—President Johnson, it is said, has read the election returns. He is more subdued. He is said to be more conservative. He has come back from his illness, his election defeat and a winter of venomous criticism a chastened man, calling for the tax increase he rejected in 1966, and extolling conservatism.

This at least is the popular illusion. It is based on the tone and substance of his State of the Union speech. But if speeches can be accepted as a guide to future policies in Washington, which would be hard to prove, the theory of a transformed Johnson, of retreat to conservatism, is probably nonsense.

President Johnson is not shifting directions, he is merely shifting gears. He is not going from high to low, but from high to neutral momentarily. The direction is the same; the momentum is a little slower; but he is still exceeding the Republican speed limit.

It is hard to be dogmatic about this. Lyndon Johnson is not a standard brand. He is as populist as Bryan, as progressive as the two Roosevelts; in some ways as conservative as the Tafts; as ambiguous as Eisenhower; as isolationist and imperialist as Senator Russell of Georgia; and as idealistic as Wilson at Versailles and as savage as his grandfather at the Alamo.

Nobody can be sure in the face of all this human diversity where he will come out, not even his best friends, half of whom are as conservative as the oil depletion Texans, and half of whom are low tariff, civil rights, foreign aid, birth control liberals. Yet when all these contradictory forces are recognized and analyzed, the main thrust of his policy is fairly clear.

He is not a consolidator but an innovator. He may waver back and forth between the two, but essentially he is part of what Richard Hofstadter calls the "Age of Reform." Populist, progressive, a changer rather than a consolidator. He moves by fits and starts; he advances and retreats; but in general he moves with the tides of power.

This is perfectly clear in his State of the Union message. He rejected the policies of the extremes: of those who wanted to abandon South Vietnam or devastate North Vietnam. He went out of his way to appeal to the power and influence of the Soviet Union. He had very little to say to the allies in Europe, who have limited power. He was even generous to Communist China, now riven with dissension, maybe on the verge of warlordism or even civil war, and therefore vulnerable to attack.

On the home front, President Johnson compromised. Faced with conflicting evidence on whether inflation or deflation was the main threat in the economy, he suggested a delayed tax rise, he cut back the projected pace of the poverty program, insisted on his strategy and diplomacy in Vietnam, but temporized on everything else.

Yet even while compromising and temporizing—and this is the main point—President Johnson is moving and reforming and experimenting. He is sticking to the old pattern on Vietnam, but innovating on everything else. He is not proving that the advantages of bombing North Vietnam are greater than the disadvantages. He is not demonstrating that his policy in Vietnam is helping American interests elsewhere in the world. He is not getting the South Vietnamese to take more responsibility in the war, but is making the whole thing more and more of an American war.

Nevertheless, Vietnam aside, the President is engaged in a number of remarkable experiments. He is trying to create a wholly new cooperative relationship in economic and political and cultural affairs with the Soviet Union and its Communist allies in Eastern Europe. He is reaching out to the Governors and Mayors of America for a new political, social and economic partnership within the nation. He is trying to take poverty out of the people rather than following the old New Deal technique of merely taking the people out of poverty by giving them handouts. He is not offering a dole to the poor as in Roosevelt's time, but an opportunity through education for the poor to save themselves.

This is not a conservative but a radical program. He is not trying to follow but to transform the New Deal. He is not proposing to console the poor in their poverty but to give them the means of lifting themselves out of poverty. He is not using Federal funds to keep them where they are or to impose Federal control over the states and cities, but to finance the passage of the poor into useful, effective jobs, and create new partnerships between Washington and the state capitals and the cities and the other political centers in the world.

This, obviously, is a monumental task. In many ways it is an administrative mess but it is a creative and even hopeful mess. The President may not be able to see it through. Vietnam, with its $20-billion a year budget, may destroy his aims of reaching an accommodation with the American cities and the Soviets and the Chinese, but it cannot be said that he has gone conservative. He may be more subdued, as most observers said after his State of the Union performance. He may have made a tactical move to the right. But he is still moving and reforming. The liberals, who cry for innovation and reform, have been somewhat unfair to him in recent days: his over-all strategy is not conservative but progressive.

He was under strong pressure to spend $40 billion on a cold war antiballistic missile system; to take advantage of China's political disarray; to mount an even more aggressive economic warfare policy against the Soviet Union and the Communist East European states to keep tariffs high or even raise them higher; to approve more wiretapping and bugging and interference with personal liberty; to cut foreign aid and abandon government population control policies.

But he rejected all these proposals. If the State of the Union message means what it says, he is still a reforming President. He is in trouble with the reformers over Vietnam, but this wartime controversy only confuses the main point. Elsewhere, he is a changer, a populist, a progressive, a symbol of the innovator's spirit of Bryan, Teddy Roosevelt, Wilson, Franklin Roosevelt, Truman, and Kennedy.

'Whatever Became of...?'

The more people I meet, the fewer I remember. The memory files, it seems, are stuffed and I am always meeting people who want to be me that I don't remember who they are. I lose every time.

At the Left-Handers National Golf Tournament, I was asked to present the trophies to the winners. The Open Champion was Vic Lombardi. The Senior champ was Sam Rice. Both were ballplayers. I kept mumbling to myself: "Did Vic play for the Dodgers? Sam, now Sam's pitched for the Senators. But was it Ernie Lombardi?—no, he was a catcher."

I put on my vacant smile and gave them the trophies. When I got home, I yanked a book off a shelf. It is called "Whatever Became Of...?" and is written by Richard Lamparski. Neither Rice nor Lombardi is in it, so Mr. Lamparski doesn't know they're playing golf.

Still I kept thumbing through the volume. This is like consulting a dictionary for a word, and seeing four or five other ones, then closing the book without remembering the original one. Gene Tunney, for example, was a pretty fair boxer, but was now a director of Schick Safety Razor Company, Technicolor

Inc., and Eversnap. Sally Rand, a stripper, is 61 and owns a ranch near Glendora, Calif. Max Schmeling, German pug, is a Coca-Cola executive in Essen. Miss America of 1919 (the first), Edith Hyde Robbins MacCarthy, works at the Gypsy Tea Room on Broadway. Charles A. Lindbergh is a director of Pan-American Airways and lives in Darien, Conn.

Bobby Jones, the all-time golf champ, has a spinal ailment and lives in a wheelchair. He is vice-president of A. G. Spaulding. Alexander Kerensky, the last leader of Russia before the Communists took over, is now 85 and teaches Russian history at Stanford University. Movie star Helen Gahagan Douglas, who ran for the U.S. Senate against Richard Nixon, is a grandmother living on the West Side of New York.

Pola Negri, the femme fatale whose slumberous eyes had the opposite effect on men, writes her memoirs in San Antonio. She's Polish and her real name is Apollonia Chalupec. John L. Lewis, the one-time United Mine Workers leader, lives in Alexandria, Va. He combs his eyebrows.

Red Grange, the Galloping Ghost, lives at Indian Lakes Estates in Florida and clips coupons. Amos 'n' Andy shoot golf together and fish the Pacific coastal waters. Dolores Costello, once married to John Barrymore, lives on a ranch at Fallbrook, Calif. Another Barrymore wife, Elaine Barrie, lives in Trinidad. "Mr. Anthony," whose Goodwill Hour on radio was an agony of domestic conflict in the 1930s, is Commissioner of Human Relations for the County of Los Angeles. Gabriel Heatter ("Ah, there's good news tonight.") lives in retirement at Miami Beach. Jesse Owens, world champ sprinter, is a Chicago disc jockey.

Two great horsemen, Earl Sande and Eddie Arcaro, live in Munsey Park and Garden City, Long Island. Not far away, in Flushing, Gertrude Ederle lives, still a spinster. Adele Astaire, who once danced with her brother Fred, is Mrs. Kingman Douglass, has three homes, and nothing to say.

Ruby Keeler, a tap dancer once married to Al Jolson, is Mrs. John Lowe, mother of four teen-agers. Blanche Sweet, who was a movie star in 1909, is a widow living on Lexington Avenue in New York. Bert Wheeler, a great comic and an ever greater human being, lives at The Lambs in New York. His partner, Robert Woolsey, died in 1938.

George Carpentier owns a restaurant in a Paris hotel. In the Pyrenees Mountains of France are two retired movie stars—Annabella, and Eleanor Boardman. Kay Kaiser practices Christian Science in a small North Carolina town. James J. Braddock lives in North Bergen, N.J., and is a member of the Operating Engineers Union.

Rather Curious Situation

HARRISBURG—Ironically perhaps, the new Republican Shaffer Administration may run into more trouble from its own people on legislative matters than opposition Democrats!

Out-of-control and minority-stricken Democrats on the legislative side this year at least have determined not to lay out an "obstructionist" pattern in either House or Senate—insofar as Shaffer Administration programs are concerned.

This is not to say that the minority blocs in the two legislative chambers will fold up tents and go home; far from it. The point Democrats are making is simply that they will not oppose simply for the sake of opposing.

At the same time however there is some shrewd method in their "madness," as some are prone to term it.

By "going along" with most of the general administration programs expected to be introduced in the Legislature, they will be in position to recall at (legislative) campaign time next year that they did not stand in the way of those GOP programs that they feel: (1) won't work anyway, and (2) may be little more than improvements on their own programs already espoused by them and previously carried out legislatively.

In addition there is little indication Democratic blocs in either the House or Senate will be driven by their legislative leaders to either oppose or go along with administration legislation—as solid blocs. In other words, Democratic lawmakers, comparatively speaking, will be pretty much "on their own" when it comes to opposition or support of Shaffer legislative tid-bits.

All of this brings about a rather curious situation insofar as the Shaffer Administration is concerned—and its legislative activities. In the first place, the administration has only one vote to spare above the 26 required for passage of legislation in the upper chamber while in the House they are just two above the required 102.

In the case of the Senate this leaves virtually no margin whatsoever while in the whopping big House it's just about the same thing, to all practical intents and purposes.

In a legislative nutshell then this leaves the Republican Shaffer Administration faced with the somewhat appalling prospect that it must bait 100 per cent in its own ranks.

All that would be required would be a "defection" or two of a perhaps disgruntled GOP lawmaker—or even a confining illness—and out the legislative window could go that critical part of the administration program.

Meanwhile Democrats are in position to sit back and watch—their answer being: "After all, they have the power—we don't."

What are chances of Republican "defections"? In the Senate, Republicans run a decidedly tight show. They use the so-called "unit rule" heavily and drastically—that is, commitment of the bloc on majority decision.

In the House the story is somewhat different. The unit rule is not invoked too often; in fact with this large bloc it's oftentimes next to impossible. Chances of a maverick are much greater.

All of this leaves the minority Democratic blocs in fairly comfortable position—strategy-wise. Administration GOPsters well know this—and recognize that about all they can do is gnaw their fingernails and hope they will be able to swing the necessary Republican votes to their side as needed.

And for Republicans, it's a far cry from their old routine of yesterday when they held both House and Senate by comfortable margins.

Isn't that way in this 1967 session, which may well see administration Republicans running into more opposition from their own colleagues than their counterparts across the aisle!

One for The Old Pros

(C) New York Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The Green Bay Packers regained their cool, their calm and their competence in the second half of the extravagantly produced and advertised Super Bowl in the 70-degree-plus heat at the Coliseum yesterday afternoon. They knocked all delusions of grandeur out of the Kansas City Chiefs and returned to normalcy a game which looked as if it might have generated an upset.

Maybe the Packers were a wee bit overconfident. Even before the contestants took to the field, there was considerable bantering in the Green Bay dressing room. A sepulchral voice boomed out a query to Mary Fleming, the tight end.

"Who we playin', Marvin?" said the voice.

"The Super Chiefs?" said Fleming.

For two astonishing quarters Kansas City played like the Super Chiefs. The champions of the American Football League behaved as if they were at least the equals of the champions of the National Football League. Despite the fact that the A.F.L. had been generally derided as the much inferior group, they were totally unawed by their assignment of bucking the establishment.

They tackled with excessive zeal. They crashed in on Bart Starr and dumped that paragon of excellence on his britches. They stopped the Packer running game and almost — but never quite — slowed the Green Bay passing attack. With Lenny Dawson flimflamming Packer defenders with his slick ball handling and puncturing them with his passing, they did well.

In fact the Packers led at half time by an uncomfortably close margin of 14 to 10. Buddy Young, once a great star himself and now a trouble-shooter for the N.F.L., looked glum. He turned thumbs down.

"Old age and the heat are gonna get the Packers in the second half," he said. "The Chiefs are a mighty good football team. They just happened to meet a better one."

If it didn't look that way in the first half, it was proved beyond doubt in the second half. The computer mind of Vince Lombardi, their coaching genius, gave the Bays panaceas for all ills during the intermission. It was a complete recovery.

Hardly had play resumed when the Packers poured in on Dawson to stop the fakery which had been bedeviling them. Under the pressure of the first effective rush against him, he passed hurriedly and the bottom fell out of a close contest. Willie Wood cut in front of Mike Garrett and intercepted the throw, carrying it 50 yards to the 5. A moment later Elijah Pitts scurried over the goal-line and the Packers were beyond pursuit.

The pressure on Dawson never let up. On two successive plays he was smothered for losses of 25 yards. The statistics tell the story and figures never lie — Almost never anyway. He hit on 11 of 15 for 152 yards in the first half, on only 5 of 12 for 59 yards in the second.

By then an old and familiar pattern had begun to assert itself. The Packers took over ball control and the Chiefs were virtually helpless when Green Bay had the ball. They only took it away once. That was near the end when Starr threw a heaven-help-us pass half the length of the field to the 11 yard line. It was intercepted but that was no worse than giving away the ball on a punt. Incidentally, it was the first interception against this remarkable man since mid-October. He had tossed 173 without being plucked.

Before the end, Lombardi was using his junior varsity in many positions. Naturally enough, they did just about as well as the varsity because the momentum gained by Wood's interception early in the second half was never lost again. The elderly codgers in the Packer line-up merely needed this break to put a stranglehold on the Chiefs with sharper blocking, sharper tackling and sharper everything else.

If Green Bay rooters, overjoyed though they were, grew a little misty-eyed it was because this game marked the end of the Packer trail for Jim Taylor, again the rampaging second-effort fullback, and Paul Hornung, the once wondrous halfback who didn't even see action. They carried the Packers for nine years and neither will be back next season.

The 35-10 victory of the Packers upholds the prestige of the N.F.L., just as it was supposed to do. But there were ominous warnings for the future. The young Chiefs will be around for a long while and they will get better. Some day they will win the Super Bowl game — but not yesterday. The Packers were too much for them.

Ice Fishing Derby Set for January 22

What could easily turn out to be Warren's first winter carnival will be staged Sunday, January 22—if!

That is, if the weather co-operates as the Warren Field and Stream Club introduces a number of correlated winter sporting opportunities at Chapman Dam, with activity getting under way at 10 a.m. and continuing on throughout the afternoon.

Chairman Bud Jones has made some elaborate plans to entertain the sportsmen and their families willing to brave the day outdoors in January, if the day is one that requires bravery, with a series of events that will take advantage of both the snow and ice at the well-known summer recreation center.

Ski-mobility rides will be featured. At least four ski-mobility will be on hand to skim riders over the snow-packed roadway of the park, all the way from the main parking area to the camping complex and back. There will be no charge for this fun-filled experience.

On the ice of the lake, a fishing derby will be in progress throughout the day, or at least up to the point in late afternoon when prizes will be awarded.

Also on the ice of the lake, skating will be possible on a special area that is to be cleared of snow through the volunteer efforts of Myron Bullock, park superintendent.

Tobogganing and "flying saucer-ing" will be allowed on one area of the park, but participants will have to provide their own equipment for this activity.

And those husky outdoor appetites that are bound to develop can be satisfied at the Club's famous Fox Hole Inn that will be set up and doing business on the park grounds near the main pavilion. It will be at this location too, that various sporting equipment will be on display by local sporting goods dealers.

In all, Chairman Jones promises it will be a day for all area sportsmen and their families to remember—if. For Bud remembers that a similar venture last year had to be cancelled out because of unseasonably warm weather.

In can't happen again this year, Bud states, so he extends a cordial invitation to all sportsmen to bring their families and enjoy a day of winter outdoor sports. Sunday, January 22, may be the first of a series of annual "Ice" days to be enjoyed at Chapman Dam if the Warren Field and Stream Club can get the weatherman to co-operate.

McGee Will Retire on Great Game

By MIKE RATHET

AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Sayonara," said Max McGee with more than a trace of a southern drawl. "It's a great one to quit on and I quit."

And so McGee, a 34-year-old veteran of the National Football League wars for 11 years, decided yesterday to retire after playing a hero's role as the Green Bay Packers whipped the Kansas City Chiefs 35-10 in the first Super Bowl game.

"I feel," said McGee as he tossed his shoulder pads into his dressing cubicle, "like I caught more passes today than I did all year... and it feels real good because it's a long grind when you go down to the last couple of games at my age."

McGee went down to the last couple as one of the Packers' forgotten men, a one-time pass receiving leader, a clever, witty teammate who roamed with Golden Boy Paul Hornung and a vital, if apparently forgotten, substitute.

But when flanker Boyd Dowler suffered a slight separation of his right shoulder on the third play of the game, Coach Vince Lombardi had little doubt who was going in.

McGee, who had caught only four passes while scoring just once during 14 regular season games, responded by almost doubling his entire production against the Chiefs as he grabbed seven of Bart Starr's passes for 138 yards and two touchdowns.

McGee, however, had no idea he would play as much as he did.

"The legs are still good, but the old windpipe gives me trouble now," McGee explained. "Oh, I figured I was going to play some, but when things are going good, you don't often get in."

Things went so good that McGee never came out, playing more than he had in any other game this season. But he knew how to use his experience once he got in there.

"I can still get the job done because it's mostly in knowing the defenses," McGee explained. "I don't get there as fast as I used to, but I still get to the same spot and that's what's important."

"You know, you take two steps off the line and you know what defenses they're in. The rest is getting to the spot."

Then McGee explained how the Packers in general and he in particular had worked on taking the Kansas City defense apart.

"We didn't think their defensive backs were that good," McGee explained. "So we went to work on them. We thought we could beat them on the counter, man to man, and it did turn out to be too much for them."

On the counter, it's Starr's job to recognize the opposing team's blitz. He then calls an automatic and the Packers try to get the defense to cover on a man to man situation with McGee on a corner back, in this case Willie Mitchell.

"You blitz a lot and you're gonna get hurt," McGee said. "No one can cover you man to man even if you're an old man like me."

McGee had a field day, making a one-hand catch on a 37-yard pass for his first touchdown and grabbing a 13-yarder from Starr for No. 2.

But, he said with a smile, he had trouble on both of them.

"The first one was an automatic and Starr read the blitz," McGee said. "When I looked back, the ball was coming. Bart had been hurried, and it looked like he was throwing it in back of me so I put my hand back to get it. I didn't think I could catch it."

"But it stuck."

McGee said now he's going to take a vacation with Hornung, his longtime buddy.

"My roomie's getting married," said McGee with a big laugh. "And I'm going on the honeymoon."

WINNING TRIO, PLUS MCGEE

Lombardi: Chiefs Don't Compare to Loop's Best

By BOB MYERS

Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It took a little verbal arm twisting, but Coach Vince Lombardi of the world champion Green Bay Packers said after the game yesterday.

"Kansas City has a real top team, but I don't think it compares with the top teams in the National Football League."

"That's what you wanted me to say — now I've said it," said Lombardi, smiling good naturedly and adding that he thought the Dallas Cowboys, who fell before his Packers for the NFL title, were better than the American League Chiefs.

"No," he continued, when asked about the close 14-10 Packer margin at the half. "We didn't make any adjustments at the half. We just told the men they had to be more aggressive in the second half, and they were."

The Packers' dressing room was a happy one but, oddly enough, there was no unusual noise or celebrating.

The first man to troop through the scores of writers waiting at the door was a defensive back, Doug Hart. He was grinning from ear to ear but contained himself until he passed through the door.

Then the three-year man from Arlington, Tex., State could hold back no more.

He let out one war whoop. It was the loudest of the few shouts that followed.

The familiar question was asked — was there a key play? "I don't know what a key play is," said Lombardi. "I'd say it was the touchdown they called back. Again, Lombardi was joking."

He referred to Carroll Dale's 64-yard touchdown pass from Bart Starr which was called back on an illegal motion. Who was the guilty party?

"It was an interior lineman. Do we have to get into it any more than that?"

As for strategy, the Packer boss conceded that one of their prime targets was defensive back Willie Mitchell, who was burned badly on several occasions by Green Bay's aerial attack.

Lombardi was given the game ball by the players.

Starr said the Packers did indeed settle down and play better in the second half, and admitted:

"Sure, I was disturbed in the first half. We weren't moving the ball at all. Then we just settled down and did what we're supposed to — get out there and win the ball game."

"I thought that ball would never come down," said Willie Wood, whose 50-yard return of a Len Dawson pass set up the touchdown that put Green Bay comfortably in front early in the second half, 21-10.

Fullback Jim Taylor said he had no comment about his future with the Packers at this time. Taylor played out his option this season. Club intimates said the bruiser from Louisiana State plans to discuss his future shortly with Lombardi.

Taylor just chuckled when asked what went on when he and the Chiefs' huge tackle, Buck Buchanan, had a rumble in the second half.

"That big devil is too big to tangle with," said Jim, who stands 6-0 and weighs 215 to Buchanan's 6-7, 287.

Dale observed, "They put a lot of pressure on us in the first half with those crazy defenses. Max McGee, the pass catching hero, was congratulated on all sides by his teammates. He is calling it quits after 11 years in the NFL."

"The biggest thrill," concluded Elijah Pitts, who scored two touchdowns, "is winning the game for the NFL."

Dale observed, "They put a lot of pressure on us in the first half with those crazy defenses. Max McGee, the pass catching hero, was congratulated on all sides by his teammates. He is calling it quits after 11 years in the NFL."

"The biggest thrill," concluded Elijah Pitts, who scored two touchdowns, "is winning the game for the NFL."

He referred to Carroll Dale's 64-yard touchdown pass from Bart Starr which was called back on an illegal motion. Who was the guilty party?

"It was an interior lineman. Do we have to get into it any more than that?"

As for strategy, the Packer boss conceded that one of their prime targets was defensive back Willie Mitchell, who was burned badly on several occasions by Green Bay's aerial attack.

Packers Explode In Big Last Half

By JACK HAND

AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bart Starr and Max McGee picked holes in Kansas City's pass defense according to a game plan that led the National Football League champions to a 35-10 victory over the best of the American Football League yesterday in the first Super Bowl test.

Starr, a master of the third down play, followed directions by working on the Chiefs' secondary with the 34-year-old McGee his favorite target.

In the meantime, the battle-tested NFL champs applied tremendous pressure on Len Dawson, the Kansas City passer, for a victory that meant $15,000 for each Green Bay player.

"We thought we could work on their defensive backs," said McGee, who caught two touchdowns passes. "We thought we could beat them man to man, and it turned out that way."

Coach Vince Lombardi of the Packers, disappointed because the Packers led only 14-10 at the half, told them to "start tackling and stop grabbing." They responded by smearing Dawson time after time.

"In my opinion, the Chiefs don't rate with the top teams in the NFL," said Lombardi. "They're a good football team with fine speed, but I'd have to say NFL football is tougher. Dallas is a better team."

Lombardi's veterans threw the Kansas City passer six times and came up with a key interception, a 50-yard ramble by Willie Wood that took the ball to the five in the third period and led to a touchdown that broke the game open.

Hank Stram, the Kansas City Coach, was well pleased with his team's first half effort that excited the crowd of 63,036 in the 93,000-seat Los Angeles Coliseum.

The crowd, incidentally, was far short of a sellout and smaller than expected. But the player cuts of $15,000 for the winner and $7,500 for losers were guaranteed. "We played well in the first half," said Stram. "The interception by Wood changed the personality of the game. They're an excellent team."

"As I said before, I don't think any one game is a measure or criterion of the league's strength — or that you can compare the leagues by playing one game."

It was Starr's ability to connect with McGee for the two TDs and his play calling that sent Elijah Pitts and Jim Taylor through the line for three more touchdowns that gave the NFL an important prestige triumph.

The Chiefs threw a scare into the proud Packers with a fine first half in which Dawson hit Curt McClinton for a touchdown and Mike Mercer kicked a 31-yard field goal. But the Packer pressure was too much for them to handle in the lopsided second half.

In the final minutes of the game, Lombardi went to Donny Anderson and Jim Grabowski, his million-dollar rookies, as his running backs.

McGee, an 11th year pro who caught only four passes during the regular season and one more in the NFL title game with Dallas, caught TD tosses from Starr of 37 and 13 yards after he took the place of injured flanker Boyd Dowler.

Starr, who did a magnificent job of calling the right play on third down situations, was named the winner of a new sports car as the most valuable player in the game.

The award is made by a Sport Magazine.

Taylor hammered his way home from 14 yards out for his TD behind the blocking of Fuzzy Thurston and Jerry Kramer. Pitts slashed home from the five and again from the one to complete the scoring, while Don Chandler added all five extra points.

The big break through for the Packers came in the third period when they still led only 14-10. Willie Wood intercepted a Dawson pass and ran it back 50 yards to the five-yard line. Pitts then slammed over on the next play.

McGee, a veteran who appeared to be on his way out because he was used sparingly during the season, wound up the leading receiver in the game with seven catches for 138 yards. His first TD catch was a thing of beauty, a one-handed grab to beat Willie Mitchell, the Chiefs' right corner back in the first period.

Starr managed to escape a Kansas City blitz and found McGee free on the 20, and Max ran the ball in to complete a 37-yard play.

Hitting time and again on those difficult third down situations, Starr completed 16 of 23 passes for 250 yards and the two

TDs. He had one intercepted, however, only his fourth of the year. He had thrown 173 consecutive passes without having one picked off before Mitchell grabbed a deep one in the final period.

By an odd coincidence, the final score of 35-10 was exactly the same as in 1950 when the Cleveland Browns from the old All-America Conference upset the Philadelphia Eagles, defending NFL champions. However, this time the shoe was on the other foot, and the oldest established league managed to cling to its superiority.

Coach Hank Stram's odd-spaced blocking and his changing defenses appeared to bother the Packers in the first half although Starr usually was able to find his target with a pass when he needed yardage.

Once the Packers began to apply the big pressure on Dawson, the game broke wide open. Lionel Aldridge and Ron Kostelnik got Dawson for an eight-yard loss in the second period, the only time he was smeared in that half. But in the second half, Henry Jordan, Willie Davis, Kostelnik and the blitzing Lee Roy Caffey dragged him down in key situations.

The Packers were two-touchdown favorites going into this first meeting of NFL and AFL champions after the merger of last June. Although the two leagues will meet every year for a world championship in a Super Bowl, they will continue to go their own ways during the regular season until 1970.

As Green Bay already had won about $8,500 for beating Dallas two weeks ago for the N.F.L. championship, this triumph boosted their post season earnings for two games to $23,500, an all-time record for a team event. The old high was $12,794 by the winning Los Angeles Dodgers in the 1963 World Series.

Dawson had a fine first half in which he hit with 11 of 15 for 152 yards and a touchdown. He was getting fine protection and was escaping the Packer rush by rolling out and throwing on the run. Several times he kept the ball and ran for gains.

Kentucky, in Doldrums of Worst Season on Court, Defeated Again

By TED MEIER

Kentucky has met its Waterloo at the hands of Florida in college basketball.
Kentucky, the team that nearly won the national championship last season in the NCAA final against Texas Western, absorbed an 89-72 shellacking from Florida, Saturday night and was virtually eliminated from the Southeastern Conference race and from any further national recognition in 1967.
"There's no doubt about it," Adolph Rupp, veteran Kentucky coach, said before the game at Joe Mark Joins ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Joe Mark, an offensive coach at North Carolina for the last eight years, has been named offensive line coach for the U.S. Naval Academy football team.

Mark, 37, was a blocking back and guard at William and Mary. He was a college teammate of Jack Cloud, who now coaches Navy's 150-pound football team.
Mark's appointment was announced Saturday by Capt. Alan R. Cameron, the academy's director of athletics.

"It was a crucial game for us, too," said Tommy Bartlett, coach of the Gators who took over first place in their bid to win the SEC crown for the first time.
Florida, now 11-1, swept to a 10-1 lead and led all the way in leading Kentucky its sixth defeat in 11 starts. Gary Keller and David Miller each scored 23 points to lead the Florida attack. Bob Tallent topped Kentucky with 26 while Louie Dampier, last year's All-America player for the Wildcats, added 17.
Recalling Napoleon's historic battlefield defeat at Waterloo in 1815, the third-ranked New Mexico Lobos lost on the road like Kentucky. Wyoming upset the Lobos 86-76 Friday and Denver administered a second defeat Saturday 71-66.
Top-ranked UCLA and the other teams in The Associated Press Top Ten, in contrast, had little trouble. Unbeaten UCLA made it 12 in a row with a smashing 116-78 home victory over Stanford as Lew Alcindor, the Bruins' sophomore superstar, tossed in 37 points although sitting out 11 minutes.

whose 13-game winning streak was shattered by Southern Illinois earlier in the week, rebounded with a decisive 103-74 whacking of Bradley at Peoria. Butch Beard, Louisville's sophomore star, scored 41 points as the Cardinals made their record 14-1 for the season.

St. Bona Trips Niagara, 79-77

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — St. Bonaventure battled back from a 12-point deficit yesterday and then held off a last-minute rush by Niagara University to win 79-77 in a Memorial Auditorium basketball thriller.
Niagara, leading in the first half, piled up the 12-point margin before St. Bonaventure bounced back with six quick points to trail at intermission 47-41.
Niagara's Alan Schug fired in 32 points, 21 in the opening 20 minutes of the game, to lead in the contest scoring.

Hi School Sprinter Stars in K-C Meet

BOSTON (AP) — It used to be that Bill Gaines was only interested in baseball, but now, with rings on three of his fingers and interchangeable engineers caps on his head, the little 18-year-old is aiming for the Olympics and the title, "World's Fastest Human."
There are those who consider it a tossup as to which will come first.
Gaines is an 18-year-old high school junior from Mullica Hill, N.J., who first burst into prominence last March when he won the AAU 60-yard dash title at Albuquerque, N.M., with a time of 6.0, just one-tenth of a second off the indoor record.
Saturday night, he came within the same margin of Barney Ewell's 28-year-old standard in the 50-yard dash at the Boston Knights of Columbus Games. Gaines' time for the 50 was 5.2. His performance was, in fact, about the only noteworthy thing that happened in the first Eastern Indoor track and field meet of the season — unless the fact that John Thomas, now competing for the Boston A.A., seven feet in the high jump again interests you.
Gaines won the watch given to the top athlete of the meet, receiving more votes from the assembled writers than all the other participants combined.
This is only the third year of track competition for the 5-6, 142-pound youngster, who had to be coaxed away from "my first love" — baseball — by Clearview High School track coach Charley Way.
Way started Gaines in 880-yard competition with seventh and eighth graders but didn't take long to discover he had a

OUTDOORS by Don Neal

A New Friend

I've got a new friend. His name is Plummer Wilson and he lives down at Kelletville, and has been living down there for the past seventy-six years. I've never seen the man, but any man that can write a letter like the one he penned to me this past week is a friend of mine — sight unseen.
For while I didn't have the opportunity to shake hands with Plummer, and don't find it within my reasoning to agree with all that he says, I know right now that he is my kind of man. He says what he thinks, and to heck with the consequences.

Maybe he's a holdover from the rugged frontiersmen I have been writing about lately who Bruce Catton said were the strength of our nation, and whose passing has left us with a watered-down national stamina. If not, he's about as close as one is going to come to finding one in this modern day and age.

Plummer starts off by telling me of the time he and two of his chums walked a mile after school just to see the first deer track reported in Forest County during his youth. This was back in 1905. And while a statement like this may seem almost untruthful to the average hunter today, there are still a few of us around who know that he's not only telling the truth, he's coming close to bragging. Deer were s-c-a-r-c-e in those days.

Then he talks of, of course, the event it was a few years later when the Pennsylvania Game Commission brought in some Michigan deer and released them as breeding stock. And about how the hunting season was closed for five years to allow these deer to get a start in our local forests. Forests that were mostly composed of standing virgin hardwoods that had escaped the axe of the "white pine" lumbermen of an earlier day.

Then he tells of the big sawmills that were built at Kelletville in 1904 by the Collins estate, and how a few years later the countryside was swept by huge forest fires. It was on the ashes of these forest fires, he claims, that the finest wildlife browse ever grew to benefit game of all varieties.

There's no question he is absolutely right about the benefits of our "disasterous" forest fires to game populations. For long before the lumberman's axe had created conditions that brought about forest fires, the Indians of this area had used forest fires as their only wildlife management tool. They knew that when a forest fire swept through a virgin forest, killing off enough trees to allow the sunshine to penetrate to the forest floor, a regenerative growth soon appeared that attracted all species of game to it.

And as Plummer says, now that most of our second-growth forests have outgrown the "browse" stage, and forest fires have been under control for several decades, we cannot expect to have the game we had back in the "good old days." In writing of these long-gone times, he says, "I have seen a hundred deer in one day." But he agrees that we can't hope to see them in this number in our modern forests. He maintains, too, that another deterrent to large deer herds today is the traffic on our high-speed highways. He doesn't think that a deer has much of a chance with drivers travelling 60 to 70 miles per hour.

Another thing that is hard to adjust to for an old timer like Plummer is the hunting pressure we have today. Having followed him on the woodland trails of the state by only a few years, I know exactly what he means. Even in my time you could hunt deer all day at times without seeing another hunter.
But with 6,000 hunting camps in Forest County (his figure) and an average of four deer hunters to a camp, it's easy to see that neither Plummer or I will ever see those times again.

At one point in the letter, Plummer blames the Forest Service for cutting down all of the den trees and "ringing" hundreds of small trees. "Why don't they leave the woods alone?" he asks, insisting that natural developments will take care of the problem of growing the forests back to maturity. Cutting the den trees, he claims, is the reason squirrel populations are diminishing.

Another gripe that seems to be bothering Plummer (and it is bothering me, too) is the number of flicker-brained gunners we have in the woodlands during summer weekends. To quote Plummer on this subject: "Every weekend the woods are full of young kids and men with guns. They shoot everything they see. There should be a law against carrying a gun in the woods on weekends. How do they expect wildlife to raise and feed their young?" He predicts that if this keeps up that in 10 or 15 years there won't be any hunting.

I'm inclined to agree with him. Except that I'll make the figure 25 years and include, along with the weekend trigger-flipper, those in-season hunters who shoot near roads and in safety zones.
No letter I have received lately has pleased me more than this one from Plummer Wilson. He's a man of that rare breed who has enough love for his sport to worry about its problems, and has the fortitude to come forth and offer his suggestions as to how these problems can be overcome.
I like that kind of man.

It may be less grand than most station wagons. But it's also about a grandless.

You're looking for a miniature moving van. A Squaresback Sedan. It's even with its back seat folded down. Only 104 inches high at the average station wagon.
Which means you can't lug 30 bags of luggage. Or a full-sized double bed.
But maybe you should check out a carry 15 cases. Or a full-sized king bed. Then you can save a lot of money, with a Squaresback Sedan. At only $2,295*.

And that only goes for less than most conventional wagons to begin with. It keeps on going for best.

A Squaresback travels about 27 miles on a gallon of gas. It takes 3.5 gallons to fill a 12.5 gallon tank. It never needs an oil change or filter, because it's cooled by air. It's got a gas-saver 3500 miles on a set of tires. And it's got a rear air conditioning system.

So before you go out and buy some station wagon that's as big as a house, ask yourself this question: "Will that extra grandness be worth an extra grand?"

President's Speech Drew Mixed Reaction

By THOMAS E. MULLANEY
N. Y. Times Financial Editor
(c) N. Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK—A near-record volume of stock trading... sharp gains in the market averages... the best rise for bond prices in nine years... scattered reductions in interest rates. That's how the financial markets received President Johnson's State of the Union message last week.

Easier money always makes pleasant music in Wall Street, but the markets' swift and dramatic responses last week were exceptional. They paid no heed to the difficulties that loom in this year of economic adjustments. They were also oblivious to tensions in wage negotiations, in foreign affairs and in government-business relations.

While the President's cautious, comprehensive and conciliatory speech mollified many, as it seemed designed to do, it drew a mixed reaction from the business and economic community.

It pleased sensitive traders and investors because it ended their long uncertainty about the administration's program and reinforced the move to easier money.

However, for one reason or another, investors tended to overlook a potentially bearish aspect of the presidential discourse—the call for a 6 per cent surcharge on personal and corporate income taxes.

Others, though, did not ignore the implications of that and other proposals of the President. Clear inflationary overtones were discerned in the suggested fiscal policy for the year ahead and the promise of something for almost everybody (including higher taxes).

For one thing, spending is definitely headed higher for defense purposes, social security and other government programs.

So are business costs.

But there is no assurance that federal revenues will rise in company with expenditures. Nor is there any certainty that wage and price increases will be curbed. And the sturdiness of corporate profits and capital investment remains questionable.

Thus, the business world may be confronted with many more problems than the financial markets seemed to recognize this week, not the least of which might be a significant further softening in the production and sales of consumer durable goods.

There was a tendency to discount the likelihood that Congress would approve a tax rise this year so long as civilian sectors of the economy continue to show signs of slackened momentum.

Even if a tax increase were adopted as of July 1, the added take by the federal treasury this year would be no more than $2.5 billion. Extra Social Security payments alone would offset that tax inflow.

Meanwhile, easier money might so enlarge the demands for credit that, before long, the near-crisis conditions of last summer's money market might be restored, particularly if the government again sells agency participation certificates.

The preferred course of action, businessmen maintain, is lowered government spending for nondefense programs—rather than higher taxes—to keep federal revenues and expenditures more closely in line.

Some business critics of the President's message fastened their attack on what they called a "gimmick" that was resorted to—a proposed tax increase that might or might not be adopted, but which meanwhile allows a bolstering of revenue for the federal budget in the face of rising spending.

Even so, the best the President could do was to compute a deficit of $9.7 billion for 1967 and $8.1 billion for 1968.

The greatest acclaim for the President's tax plan came from economists who have been pleading for some such federal fiscal plan to finance war costs and thus remove part of the anti-inflation burden from restrictive monetary policy.

These advocates of higher taxes are pleased that they would not come before midyear. That gives time, they say, for a better reading of the economy's course.

Should the present slowdown accelerate it will be possible to abandon the tax plan early enough and resort instead to more stimulative economic policies.

All the talk, reaction and assessment of the President's message quickly faded when business and Wall Street took note of the power of the stock and bond market's performances last week.

Wednesday's rally was resumed on Thursday. It faltered but picked up again after the aluminum industry announced sizable price increases. Even the government's prompt criticism of that action failed to dampen enthusiasm. Trading lost momentum on Friday, however.

The result was a record trading week and broad gains for a long list of stocks and for the major market averages.

Prices on the bond market, after the President's message, rose as much as 3 points and held well for the balance of the week.

Meanwhile major financing deals were facilitated by the improved credit atmosphere.

American Telephone and Telegraph's $250 million debenture issue sold at a yield almost half a point below other Bell system deals late in 1966. It sold out quickly and moved to a premium. Then Bethlehem Steel marketed a $150 million debenture issue at a 5.4-per-cent yield that matched Telephone's deal. It was an immediate sellout.

Fenton will discuss the need of having standards, the various types of standards and he will explain various techniques of setting standards and will cover the use of conventional studies. From these studies, he will show how basic standards are then included in cost accounting systems.

Fenton received his education for Mechanical Engineering at the Royal Technical College in Paisley, Scotland. He is a graduate of the London University, where he received a Bachelor of Science Degree in 1943, with First Class Honors which is equivalent to a Master's Degree in Engineering.

Fenton started his career as a student apprentice in Scotland. On completion of his studies he became Production Development Engineer with an aircraft engine company. He has been employed as Assistant Work Manager and Senior Production Engineer in tool and bearing manufacturing firms.

Since joining H. B. Maynard and Company, Inc., Fenton has worked on a variety of assignments using numerous engineering techniques. He spent two years in Germany working in the manufacture of generators, appliances, and motors. There he assisted their management with installation problems and rebalancing for refrigerator assembly and sub-assembly lines. He developed MTM-based standard data and trained their personnel in the use of MTM and other industrial engineering techniques.

For a company making glass lined and alloy steel chemical handling equipment, Fenton installed standards on all direct labor operations. Fenton has also carried out assignments which include shop layout, methods improvement, tooling and processing procedures, and work measurement for diverse machine shop and assembly operations in automotive engine and related products plants.

He has been a Registered MTM Practitioner since 1960. He is a member of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers and the Institution of Production Engineers.

The membership chairman of the local N.A.A. Chapter is Dorwin F. Young of the Jamestown Metal Corporation.

Viet Veteran Receives New Artificial Voicebox

BOSTON (AP)—Doctors at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary have used an artificial tube and valve fashioned from the patient's skin to replace a shattered larynx and restore the voice of a Marine wounded in Vietnam.

Lance Cpl. Walter Lopata, 25, of Three Rivers, Mass., greeted reporters with, "Hello, How are you?" They were his first spoken words since he was wounded by Viet Cong shrapnel Oct. 11.

In two operations, doctors substituted the tube and valve, made from skin from Lopata's thigh, for the broken larynx. The second operation was performed Friday by Dr. William W. Montgomery of the infirmary and Lt. Cmdr. Robert Toohill, chief of the ear, nose and throat service at Chelsea Naval Hospital.

Dr. Montgomery said the operation was the first of its kind. He said he thought the procedure was simple but it "will take a year or two to get the kinks out."

He said the operation on Lopata was "a complete success." Dr. Montgomery said the surgical technique could be used to restore the voice of most of the estimated 6,000 persons in the United States who have their larynxes removed each year because of cancer.

FIRST FOREIGN POLICY STAND

Romney Moves On Bombs Issue

DETROIT (AP) — Gov. George W. Romney's unannounced campaign for the 1968 Republican presidential nomination expanded significantly last week with his first calculated plunge into the foreign policy arena.

The shift marks a sharp departure from Romney's previous reluctance to discuss foreign policy issues, particularly the war in Vietnam.

As recently as a week ago, newsmen were told that questions about foreign policy would not be answered.

Now, Romney suggests that the Johnson administration may be placing too much emphasis on bombing North Vietnam as a means of cutting off supplies moving to the South from Hanoi.

Romney and Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam, met behind closed doors in Washington for more than an hour Friday to discuss the war. Neither man would reveal details of their talk.

But Romney's position, tentatively taken and still in the formative stage, was unveiled privately at a Washington breakfast with some newsmen.

He discussed some of the factors he is weighing in adopting his view on the Vietnam conflict — chief among them the emphasis placed on bombing of the North.

Romney says saturation bombing failed to bring Germany to her knees in World War II because it could not overcome human adaptability.

He says this adaptability is even greater in Vietnam, where American bombers are striking at an essentially undeveloped country rather than a modern, industrialized nation.

Romney has not said what he

Retired General Criticizes White's Plans

HARRISBURG (AP) — Retired Brig. Gen. Thomas W. Scott Jr., reiterated yesterday that unit commanders in the Pennsylvania National Guard "must retain the power to choose their principal staff officers."

Scott is chairman of a newly formed committee of retired officers which is trying to block Senate confirmation of Gen. Thomas R. White Jr., as state adjutant general.

The committee of eight retired guard officers has charged White with dictating assignments to principal staff and command positions "over the vehement protests of the 28th Division commander," Gen. Henry Fluck.

White has replied that Fluck made the assignments in question.

Red China Set Conditions For Remaining Out of War

WASHINGTON (AP) — A French editor says Red China has set conditions for remaining out of the Vietnam war and the United States is observing them.

Rene Dabernat, foreign editor of the magazine Paris-Match, says the Chinese assurances were relayed through the French Foreign Office.

In a copyright interview in the U.S. News & World Report Dabernat said:

"Last spring, a diplomat from the Red Chinese Embassy in Paris asked the Quaid'Orsay (French Foreign Office) to let Washington know that Peking would not enter the war on three conditions: these were that the United States not invade Red China, that it not invade North Vietnam and that they not bomb the dikes of the Red River in North Vietnam.

"France transmitted the message. I verified this in Washington.

Dabernat added that a short time later President Johnson and other top-level U.S. officials "gave the necessary signals to Peking in various public speeches to show that they agreed to these conditions."

"I have to point out, however, that all this happened before the Red Guards started running wild in China."

"Then, after the Manila conference, Communist China was informed through diplomatic channels that President Johnson wanted to bring about a process of stabilization and peace in the Pacific. If only Red China did not try to use force to extend its influence in Asia."

Dabernat said the United States should stop the bombing of North Vietnam, halt its troop buildup for a period of three months and limit its military activity to surveillance of the demilitarized zone and to counter-terroring enemy action.

He went on: "But in exchange for this de-escalation you shouldn't expect a strict and simultaneous de-escalation on the part of the Communists. The reason is that there are two different kinds of war being waged in Vietnam: the one the United States is leading is a kind of push-button war which can be halted and restarted again with out great difficulty. For (North Vietnamese President) Ho Chi Minh it's a guerrilla war based on the morale of the individual guerrilla."

"If the Viet Cong learn that Ho Chi Minh is negotiating while they're getting killed in rice fields, they'll lose their will."

"I know from good sources that Hanoi can't begin negotiations until it knows for certain that these negotiations will lead to peace."

Rhodesia May Split

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Secret moves are under way to form a political party to oppose the white-dominated government of Prime Minister Ian Smith and to reopen talks with Britain on Rhodesia's independence, the Salisbury Sunday Mail said.

The party is provisionally called the Reconstruction party and it is believed that businessmen and professional men are leading the movement, the newspaper said. It added the movement has been under way for the last two weeks.

A "manifesto," issued last week, sets out nine aims of the new party, the paper said, including implementing British constitutional proposals as accepted by the Rhodesian Cabinet and reopening negotiations with Britain on the means of a return to legality. Smith's government declared unilateral independence from Britain on Nov. 11, 1965 and Britain regards this as an act of treason.

Some observers suggested that Romney revealed his position while it still is in the embryonic stage because of reports that support for him was cooling since he had failed to deal with major issues.

Now, slowly and carefully, he has taken the first step in a drive aimed at eliminating those doubts.

Britons Riot Over Rhodesia

LONDON (AP) — Police clashed with thousands of demonstrators in Trafalgar Square and Whitehall yesterday as a rally in support of the white government of Rhodesia broke up in a fight.

Trouble started when banner-waving young Socialists and Liberals moved into the square, where about 5,000 persons were listening to Duncan Sandys and other Conservative supporters of Prime Minister Ian Smith's white supremacy regime in Rhodesia. Police said 11 persons were arrested.

Ex-Scout Saves Life

ROCK FALLS, Ill. (AP) — Paul Wagner, 10, of Sterling probably owes his life to the fact that Boy Scout Mike Holbrook, 17, not only was brave, helpful and prepared, but possessed of a calculating presence of mind.

Paul, disregarding a police ban, played Saturday on the thin ice above the dam on the Rock River and broke through. Mike was driving across the bridge when he saw the younger boy floundering in 10-foot-deep water.

"I studied the ice pattern and could see where it seemed to be thickest," Mike explained after he had cautiously inched his way to the hole and snaked Paul to safety.

The ice, an inch and a half at its thickest, had given way under Paul's 90 pounds but supported Mike's 140.

Mike said he had taken ice rescue training in the Boy Scouts.

Schweiker Calls for New Draft

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major overhaul in the draft system was urged last night by Rep. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., who termed the present system "a crazy quilt of inequities and uncertainties."

Schweiker, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, commented in a television interview recorded here for broadcast on Philadelphia and Pittsburgh stations.

He proposed changes under which:

—18½-year-olds would be drafted first, compared with present policy of starting at the maximum age level.

—The period of draft eligibility would be cut to four years, from 18½ to 22½ years of age, from the present seven years.

—Students who were deferred to finish college would be in the top category when they finished.

—A man who had received a student deferment to finish college could not obtain further deferment on the ground he was married.

—The separate draft calls of the 4,084 local boards would be replaced with a single call from a national manpower pool and there would be uniform standards throughout the country for deferments.

Money Shortage Curtails State Draft Physicals

HARRISBURG (AP)—State Selective Service headquarters said Friday that pre-induction physical examinations for draftees have been halted throughout the state—except in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia—because of a shortage of funds.

A spokesman said there are enough funds to continue examinations at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia throughout the month of January.

Examinations at other induction centers have been halted since last Friday, the spokesman said.

The fund shortage, the spokesman said, was caused by increasing manpower needs which caused heavier than anticipated expenses.

The spokesman added that National Selective Service headquarters has already asked the federal Bureau of the Budget to meet the added expenses until a new appropriation is approved for the fiscal year.

Income Tax Due Today For Two Groups

Farmers who earned at least two-thirds of their 1966 gross income from farming should have filed their declaration of estimated federal income tax for 1966 on or before today. Form 1040ES should be used for this purpose.

However, R. Alan Long, District of Internal Revenue for Western Pennsylvania, said that farmers need not file an estimate if they file their 1966 federal income tax return, form 1040, and pay in full any tax due by February 15, 1967.

Today is the due date for the final payment of 1966 estimated federal income tax, Long reminded taxpayers.

An amended declaration of 1966 estimated income tax may be required by today from taxpayers who have had changes in income or exemptions during the last quarter of 1966 that cause substantial increase or decrease in tax. The amended declaration form printed on the notice of installment received by taxpayers may be used to amend the original estimate or Form 1040ES (amended) may be obtained from any IRS office.

Foreign Exchange Program To Benefit from Stock Sale

Warren Area High School's student council opens a drive today to obtain funds to support a foreign exchange student at the school during the academic year 1967-68.

The group is selling shares of stock in the program.

Proceeds of the stock sale will go to the American Field Service, organization which sponsors exchange students who come to the United States for a school year.

This year, Bassna Sadek from Cairo, Egypt, and Le Van Dung from South Vietnam are attending WAHS under the program. In addition to supporting the two visitors from abroad, money obtained through last year's drive sent Dragonsenior Chris Williams to the Philippines last summer.

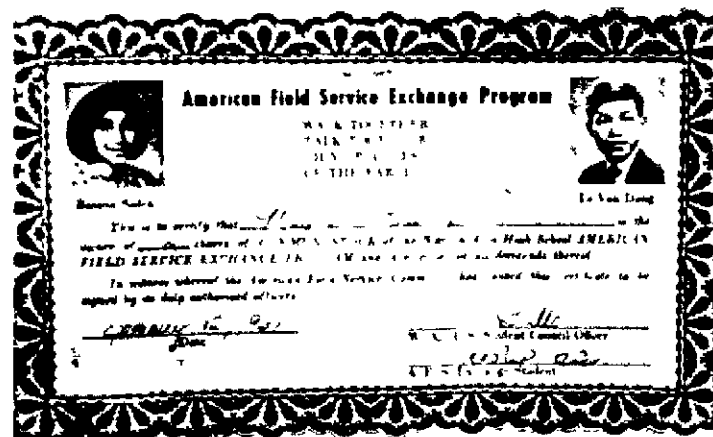

If sufficient funds are obtained through this year's stock sale, student council will both sponsor an exchange student and also send a WAHS junior abroad for the summer of 1967.

Beginning today, stock will be sold in local schools, service clubs and Parent Teacher Association meetings and at various other gatherings throughout the community.

Common stock may be purchased for 25 cents a share and preferred stock for 50 cents a share.

AFTER INSPECTION

Army Engineers View Improvements Above Dam

Improvements up the Allegheny from Warren occupied the attention of officers of the Army Corps of Engineers on their visit to Salamanca following an inspection of the Kinzua Dam and Allegheny Reservoir last week.

Construction of Salamanca's $2 million flood protection system is expected to be underway by summer.

It also was disclosed that Federal officials will treat "sympathetically" any request from the city of Olean to erect an inflatable dam in the Allegheny River to provide a recreation pool at Olean.

Brig. Gen. Willard Roper, new division engineer of the Corps' Ohio River Division, headed the group of officers on the swing northward along the Allegheny.

Col. James E. Hammer, Pittsburgh district engineer, told the Salamanca group that the bids for the flood project there are to be sought "in about two months" and a construction contract awarded about one month later. If the New York Department of Public Works acquires land for the flood system on schedule, construction of the project should be underway this summer.

The three-stage Salamanca project will begin with construction on the south side of the Allegheny River in the Main st. area. The project is to include dikes and levees along the river in the city hall area; on the north bank of the river opposite City Hall, and at West Salamanca where the Little Valley Creek flows into the Allegheny.

The Olean project embraces a proposal by former Olean Mayor Edward R. Husted that Olean consider creating an inflatable dam in the river within the city. The pool behind such a dam, Husted pointed out, could be used for fishing, boating and swimming. In high water periods, the dam would be deflated to prevent flooding behind it. A Corps of Engineers official said that there apparently was no precedent in the Pittsburgh District for such a proposal. Engineering Division Chief J. S. Minotte added, there seemed to be no serious objection apparent as far as the Corps was concerned.

The Corps of Engineers would have to approve such a project, however, before permission for such a dam would be forthcoming, it was cited.

PHOTOGRAPHY EXHIBIT ENDS TODAY

An admirer scans the photo exhibit now on display at First Presbyterian Church. The exhibition is the work of the Rev. Leon Kofod, cousin of John Kofod of Warren, and is entitled "Smiles Around the World." Today is the final day to see the photos, which have been on display since Friday. (Photo by Mansfield)

Not All Area School Officials Agree on Proposed Plans

All area school officials apparently are not in accord with the new intermediate unit plan proposed by the State Board of Education last week.

Olan S. Flickner, Venango County superintendent of schools, sees many disadvantages under the new setup. Franklin advises quote him in part as follows:

"The specific intermediate unit recommended by the state board for this area includes the counties of Clarion, Forest, Jefferson and Venango has some advantages but many disadvantages, in my opinion.

"In its favor is the fact that the four county superintendents and the four county school boards have already proven that they can work together cooperatively in the organization and operation of the Regional Instructional Materials Center. I'm sure that no more amicable working relationship could be found anywhere."

He then pointed to several disadvantages. He added:

"Yet some disadvantages are apparent. In the first place, the recommended unit is much too small to provide the services required now and in the future. In fact, it will be one of the smallest intermediate units in the state. Compare, for example, the size of our unit with the counties of Erie, Crawford and Warren; or the one to the west including the counties of Mercer, Lawrence, Butler and Beaver. Each of them have 100,000 pupils, or more, while the student population of our unit would be slightly over 35,000."

Mr. Flickner said he also disagreed with the recommendation that the unit centers be located at or near a state college.

"I also disagree with what appears to be the thinking of the committee of the state board that the intermediate unit center would be located at or near a state college. I agree, naturally, that the resources of all colleges — both state and private institutions — should be utilized and that a close relationship with all of them is desirable. However, I believe that limiting that relationship to one particular state college would be most undesirable."

Concluding his remarks, he said:

"In addition to the disadvantages cited there are other phases of the state board's recommendation to the legislature which should be studied carefully by the school officials and school board members of this county. One is the financing of the intermediate unit and its services and the other is the method of electing intermediate unit board members."

"Of course we in the county offices will lose our jobs on July 1, 1968, but if our experience and training is worth anything, we should be able to make a contribution in some capacity to the new intermediate unit office."

Local Scout Leaders Face Continuing Opportunities

Opportunities continue to face the local leaders of the Boy Scout organization as they plan for the new year of 1967, according to William Crossett, president of the Chief Cornplanter Council, Boy Scouts of America.

More than 1,500 boys are now active in this area as Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers in all types of economic areas, Crossett said, and scouting is making real progress in training boys in character development, citizenship training and mental and physical fitness.

"The changes that have occurred over the year—ever since 1910 when Scouting began in the United States—continue to offer new goals based on old experiences," Crossett, who has been active in scouting for six years, said.

Crossett believes there are six needs of major concern to all citizens. He listed "the increasing need for promoting wholesome man-boy relationships; a need for boys to have guidance in finding and living by a stable code of moral and social values; need of help in being active and participating citizens in the world to which they belong; need for increased emphasis on and training in stamina and personal fitness; need for constructive use of leisure; and a need for increased emphasis on the validity of moral and spiritual values as compared with material."

Crossett explained that scouting in this area helps to meet these needs in partnership with 44 local churches and civic organizations that are chartered to use the scout program in 57 Cub Scout packs, Boy Scout troops and Explorer posts.

"Our experience shows that scouting contributes in a major way to the training of boys," he said.

Local Scouts Launch World Fellowship Year

Members of the Boy Scouts of America in Western Pennsylvania will join millions of brother scouts around the world in a yearlong world friendship program that is being launched this month.

As a part of the 60th anniversary of world scouting, local Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, and Explorers are planning special activities that will be climaxed with friendship campfires and meetings during the week of August 1-9 when the XII World Jamboree will be held at Faragut State Park, Idaho, according to Dr. Khlar McDonald, the Chief Cornplanter Council chairman for special events.

The theme "For Friendship" will be followed by the 1,300 scouts in this area and will include correspondence, scrapbooks, tape exchanges, projects related to hiking and cooking skills from other countries and participation in the World Friendship Fund of the Boy Scouts of America.

The Chief Cornplanter Council will be represented at the XII World Jamboree by four Scouts and one adult leader.

Nearly every scout unit in this area will carry out a world scouting activity in connection with the 57th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, which will be celebrated February 7-13, Dr. McDonald said.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to help the woman with the jealous husband. Mine was like that, too, and for absolutely no reason. Finally I asked him to tell me why he was so suspicious. He replied, "Because I'm insecure. You don't pay enough attention to me."

That evening he asked me to listen for the telephone while he took a bath. I told him to heck with the telephone, I wanted to keep him company. I perched myself on the rim of the tub and described My Day. (I ignored his signs of boredom.) After his bath he went to the den to read the newspaper and I curled up in his lap and stayed there until he asked me to please get off because I was getting heavy. Then I insisted that he come to the kitchen and keep me company while I did the dishes.

The next day I telephoned him at work three times to say I was lonesome for him and to please come straight home. He said he'd be home at 6:15. When he arrived at 6:25 I asked him why he was late. I said I was worried.

For one solid week I carried on this absurd routine until finally he asked me to leave him alone. I told him I was only trying to make him feel secure. He said, "I am so secure now I am suffocating. Please get off my back."

Things are normal once more and I no longer see a single trace of jealousy.—VICTORIOUS

DEAR VIC: Thanks for letting us in on the Great Experiment. The wife with adhesive qualities does not make her husband feel secure, she merely underscores her own insecurity. Moreover, she displays a sorry lack of confidence which can cause bitter resentment. Too many people never learn that the surest way to put out a fire is to smother it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I recently read the letter from the mother who lambasted teachers who "waste" school time trying to build character instead of concentrating on the three R's.

I wish the mother who wrote that letter could stand behind me for 24 hours. For the past 30 years I have been working with delinquents and criminals. While many lawbreakers are poorly educated, some have had excellent schooling. They get into trouble not because they are uneducated but because they have had no character training.

I would like to tell the complaining mother that she should be thankful for teachers who talk about honesty and integrity because some students never learn about these things at home. The child who grows up with no character training and no example to follow is a menace to society. One of the best definitions I have ever heard is this one: "Character is what you are when you think nobody is looking." You have my permission to print my letter and my name. I am Sheriff of New Haven County.—J. EDWARD SLAVIN

DEAR SHERIFF: Many thanks for a superb letter. I hope thousands of teachers from coast to coast will see it—and I'm sure they will. A recent survey made by the National Educational Association revealed that this column is read by more teachers than any other column in the nation's newspaper.

CONFIDENTIAL TO NEEDED AN UNBIASED OPINION: You should not have discussed your personal troubles with those two. The only people who will listen objectively to both sides of an argument are the neighbors—and to them it's purely entertainment.

Want to say "no" to drinking without your buddies putting you down? Get cued in. Write for "Booze and You—For Teen-Agers Only," by Ann Landers. Send 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

LWV Topic 'Public Welfare', Tomorrow

Warren County's Public Welfare in its various aspects is the current Know Your County study being undertaken by the League of Women Voters of the Warren area. It will be the topic of discussion at the unit meetings this week at the YWCA. Duplicate meetings will be held Tuesday evening at 8 and Thursday morning at 9:30.

Mrs. William Muir is chairman for the Public Welfare chapter of the League survey. Her committee has been active over the past month assembling the information to be presented to the membership at the unit meetings.

Assisting Mrs. Muir in this chapter study are Mrs. Joseph DeFrees and Mrs. David Rice for the Department of Public Assistance, including old age assistance and help for the blind; Mrs. Walter Bergler and Mrs. Harry Segel for Warren General Hospital and the Rouse Home; Mrs. David Smith and Mrs. Lee Martin Schaeffer for Warren State Hospital; and Mrs. Donald Witkin and Mrs. Muir for non-institutional care. This latter category takes in child welfare, services for children, aid to dependent children and family service. Mrs. David Smith will be discussion leader on Tuesday evening, and Mrs. Donald Davis will lead the Thursday morning discussion.

Structure and Functions of County Government, chapter two of the Know Your County survey, has recently been completed by Mrs. F. J. Schumacher and Mrs. R. Pierson Eaton. The report on this chapter is being brought to the members through the news bulletin of the local League, "The Warren Voter", and will not be a unit discussion topic.

An invitation has been received from the Jamestown, N. Y., League for Warren members to join them for a luncheon meeting on January 25th at 1 p.m. They will meet at the Marvin House, 2 West Fifth st., Jamestown, N. Y. The discussion topic will be Water Resources, a national League study which crosses state lines. We share this interest because of the Conewango Creek and the nearby Chautauqua Lake and Lake Erie. League members may make reservations for the meeting in Jamestown at the unit meetings or by calling the secretary, Mrs. Theodore Prodromou.

All area women interested in League of Women Voters will be welcome at the Tuesday evening or Thursday morning meetings. If transportation is needed, please call Mrs. Nels Larson, 723-5514.

The Commission on Missions of Grace Methodist Church began a series of services this Sunday on "Christian Living and Doing." Mrs. Robert Young assisted by Mrs. Ralph Findley and Mrs. Jeannette Silze have planned special musical numbers for each session. Mrs. Henry Wyman and Mr. Robert Wheatall are working with the young people on their part in the program.

Mrs. Ralph VanOrd, Mrs. Carl Lindberg and Mrs. Gall Bimber are in charge of the social hour.

The topic "Forward," last evening was an introduction to the study, with Mrs. Edice Johnson, leader; Carole Sly and Chris Anderson of the MYF had devotions, and the special music number was given by a choir of approximately forty members of the youth group. The Truth Seekers Class served for the social hour.

These sessions are open to all who are interested.

dinner to be held at Brokenstraw on January 30, at 8 p.m.

PRESBYTERIAN AT BBC LONDON (AP) — The British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) has for the first time in its history appointed a non-Anglican as head of its religious broadcasting department. He is Pentty Jones, 44, a Presbyterian who formerly served as religious programs officer of the Independent Television Authority.

PRIVILEGED INFORMATION

Q. Are doctors under oath not to reveal the patient's medical history to others?
A. The relationship of physician and patient is very much like that of confessor and priest. The communications are "privileged" and are not to be repeated. Under certain circumstances a physician may be required to reveal information about a patient by court order. He may also discuss cases with colleagues, but the identity of the patient is kept confidential unless the situation is of common knowledge or the giving out of information is in the best interest of the patient.

GOUT

Q. Does the drinking of wine cause gout?
A. Not according to most authorities. A review of the medical histories of 200 gout patients showed no connection between the disease and the drinking of wine. Gout is an hereditary disorder associated with increased blood levels of uric acid.

Answers appearing in these columns are of necessity brief and general and do not necessarily reflect the opinion of all physicians. Remember—the diagnosis and treatment of disease is the function of the patient's personal physician.

Soloist For Civic Orchestra

When Warren Civic Orchestra presents its concert on Sunday afternoon, January 22, at 3 o'clock, one of the features of the program will be Robert Dietsch, singing two selections from Handel: the Total Eclipse from Sampson, and Sound an Alarm from Judas Maccabaeus.

The singer is well known in Warren for his fine voice and his work with the Barbershoppers in solo, quartet and directorial capacities. A native of Warren, he has lived in North Warren with Mrs. Dietsch and their two sons and one daughter for the past sixteen years. He received his early vocal training at Allegheny College under Howard Hutton, and Carroll A. Fowler.

Warren's Civic Orchestra has earned a reputation which has drawn musicians from Corry, Jamestown and other surrounding areas to rehearsals and the concerts. None of the musicians is paid to play in this organization, the members considering it a privilege and a personal responsibility, apparently, to produce the many fine concerts heard in Warren over the years.

This year's string section will be featured in two contrasting compositions for strings, the hauntingly beautiful Serenade by Samuel Barber, and, a vivacious excerpt from Vivaldi's Four Seasons. Beethoven's classic Lenore Overture will be sharply contrasted by the Prokofiev Classical Symphony.

As in other years, entire families are invited to take advantage of an afternoon of music at the auditorium of Warren Area High School. No admission is charged, and after the last number of the concert, an informal social hour will be held in the foyer of the auditorium with punch and cookies being served.

Small whole fish that are being broiled should be turned so both sides are well browned.

Double Ring Wedding Observed At Grace Meth.

MRS. GRAYDON DALE THOMAS

(Kofod Studio)

Grace Methodist Church was the setting for the double ring nuptial service which united in marriage Linda Lee Cobb and Graydon Dale Thomas on Saturday afternoon, January 14, at 2:30. The pastor of the church, the Rev. Ralph S. Findley, officiated, in the presence of one hundred and seventy-five guests.

Traditional wedding music was provided at the organ by J. Richard Pratt, and vocal soloist Earl Ericson. Altar decorations included palms, candelabra, vases of white chrysanthemums.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Cobb of 21 Schantz street, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell G. Thomas of Vine street, Tionesta.

Escorted on the arm of her father, the bride was gownned in beau de sole styled with fitted bodice, natural waistline, long sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. A full bell-shaped skirt terminated in a cathedral train edged with re-embroidered Alencon lace. Pearls and sequins adorned the lace applied on the bodice and skirt front. Her bouffant veil of silk illusion was secured to a dainty seed pearl crown studded with crystals, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white Fuji pompons with a white rose corsage in the center. She wore a strand of pearls and pearl earrings, the gift of the groom.

Dressed in identical gowns of moss green velvet, ivory crepe and gold satin, with bouffant veils, secured by gold satin Dior bows, were Miss Karen Gerace of Buffalo, maid of honor; Miss Maureen Call of Tionesta, a cousin of the groom and Miss Judith Fox of Warren, bridesmaids; and, the flower girl Mistress Cheryl Lynn Huber, a cousin of the bride. They carried arrangements of white Fuji mums and bronze daisy pompons.

The best man was Stephan Hale, and ushers were Mark Call, a cousin of the groom, Ronald McWilliams; all of Tionesta. The ringbearer was Master John David Huber, a cousin of the bride.

The mother of the bride chose a three-piece knit suit of turquoise with matching accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother was in a two-piece silk dress of rose, with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses. The grandmother of the groom, Mrs. Ray Shirey was remembered with a pink rose corsage.

The wedding reception was held in Fellowship Hall of the church, with one hundred and seventy-five in attendance. A five tier wedding cake was topped with a nosegay of bronze daisy pompons. At the bride's table was an arrangement of white Fuji pompons and bronze daisy pompons. Aides were Mrs. Paul Gary, aunt of the bride; Miss Roxie Dove; Miss Kathleen Nazzaro; Mrs. Geraldine Call, aunt of the groom; Miss Roxanne Eldridge.

For a wedding trip to an undisclosed destination, the bride traveled in a light blue wool suit with cranberry accessories. The new Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will reside in Mobile City after January 20. The bride is a 1962 graduate of Warren Area High School, and the Millard Fillmore Hospital School of Nursing, 1965. She is on the nursing staff at Warren General Hospital. The groom, a graduate of West Forest High School, served three years with the U. S. Army, and is now employed at National Forge.

Pre-nuptial affairs were given by Mrs. Kenneth Foreman and Mrs. Jeffrey Morrison, Mrs. Albert Fox and Judy Fox, Mrs. Carl G. Anderson. The rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the groom at the Penn Laurel.

Diamond Grange Enjoys Dinner

Hints From Heloise

KitchenCurtainProblems

DEAR HELOISE:

Does your curtain above the kitchen sink need to be washed often?

Did you wash, starch and iron that curtain last week only to find it needs it again? I did this with mine until I made new curtains and then decided I wasn't going to wear them out with constant washings.

Now I slip a large, clear plastic bag up from the bottom, over the curtain and pin it with straight pins. It doesn't show much, and when company walks in I can feel free to invite them to the kitchen for a cup of java!

When I have company, it only takes 30 seconds to "undress" my clean curtains.

Mother of four boys

DEAR HELOISE:

When I was a chorus girl our shoes rubbed painful blisters on our heels and sometimes on our insteps.

One of the older, experienced girls in the line told me to tear off a piece of cellophane from my package of cigarettes and slide it between my shoes and the irritated place. Oh, what blessed relief!

I have been using it for years now and haven't found anything else that works as well.

For garter belts that bit into my hips and left painful, itchy welts . . . you guessed it, I tried the cellophane under the binding and got instant relief.

I also found that cutting shoulder straps could be eased this way, too.

Barbara Bond

DEAR BARBARA:

We think it's great and thanks for relieving some of our pains. I tried it on a long-line bra where the stay was absolutely killing me one night. It worked like a charm.

Love,

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

I bought a piece of peg board to fit directly above the back of my stove.

I painted it to match my color scheme and hung all my kitchen tools, spatulas, etc., within handy reach on the little hooks that fit on it.

Keeps them neat and saves on drawer space which we wives never seem to find enough of.

I also put one in the back of my sons' closet for them to hang jackets, hats, toys, etc. Sure helps the back bending on my part, as it's much easier for them to help keep their room orderly.

Betty Lou

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have an electric toothbrush reserve a brush that is no longer usable for teeth. It's wonderful for scrubbing fingernails.

Run it across a bar of soap a few times, then plug it in. It cleans around and under nails just perfectly.

I always do this before I polish my nails.

Irene Miels

DEAR HELOISE:

If you have wondered what to do with sugar bowls not being used, put your jams or jellies in them.

Since they have covers, they can be put directly into the refrigerator that way.

They are decorative too, when placed on the table and saves washing an extra jelly dish.

Emma Usitolo

DEAR HELOISE:

In answer to Mrs. Sauter's question about making belts stiff again:

I buy stiff grosgrain ribbon, slightly narrower than the belt, shrink the ribbon with hot water and rip off the cardboard backing the belt.

I then edge-stitch the belt to the grosgrain ribbon.

Mrs. W. F.

DEAR HELOISE:

When you find your raisins all dried out, put them in a colander over slowly boiling water with a lid or bowl over the raisins.

In a few minutes you will have plump raisins again, fresh as ever.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN

(1957 By The Chicago Tribune)

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold

AKQ108 77 DKJ73 AK954

The bidding has proceeded West North East South

1 Pass Pass

What do you bid?

A—While we are normally inclined to permit the opponents to play a hand at one in this case we believe that a pass is clearly indicated. The opponents are playing at your best suit and it may prove that if you give them another chance the opener might be in a position to show a second suit in hearts.

Q. 2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold

AKJ9764 72 53 AKQ6

The bidding has proceeded South West North East

1 Pass 2 Pass 3 Pass

What do you bid now?

A—On the basis of values held a four spade bid is indicated. However for strategic purposes a "reverse" bid of four clubs is to elicit the best opening lead from partner if the opponent should subsequently go to five hearts as a sacrifice bid.

Q. 3—As South, vulnerable, you hold

AKJ102 QJ 9 AKQJ2

The bidding has proceeded North East South West

1 Pass 2 Pass 3 Pass

What do you bid now?

A—Partners rebid of two hearts is known to the trade as a "reverse bid" and designates a powerful holding for after this bid responds to it he is obliged to return to diamonds would have to climb to the third level. When North subsequently jumped to three no trump he indicated that his values were principally in high cards, that he had more than a mere 19 you have 18 high card points which means the opponents will be lucky to have as much as a queen and a bid of seven no trump is in order.

Q. 4—As South, vulnerable, you hold

AK 42 QJ1043 AKQJ742

The bidding has proceeded North East South

1 Pass 2 Pass 3 Pass

What do you bid?

A—This is rather a good hand and contains sufficient high card values to warrant a rebid, but such a call is not the preferred strategy with this type of hand. In all doubtful cases it is to act at once. A pass amounts to burying your head in the sand. The suggested call is an immediate bid of two diamonds and it is likely that you will have an opportunity to show the other suit at a reasonable level giving a reasonably accurate description of your hand.

Q. 5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold

AKQJ84 QKQ1063 AQ 46

The bidding has proceeded South West North East

1 Pass 1 NT Pass

What do you bid now?

A—Despite the fact that partner may have a relatively weak hand you should insist upon a game contract. The recommended call is three hearts. This hand has an original valuation of 20 points and partner has promised at least six in high cards, that enough values are on hand for a game.

Q. 6—Partner opens with one heart and you hold

AKQ8432 AK104 CK95 43

What is your response?

A—Two hearts. This hand is not strong enough to justify two forward moving bids in support of hearts. It is worth only nine points and therefore comes within the limit of a single raise.

Q. 7—As South, vulnerable, you hold

AK102 AK1084 DK94 AKJ83

The bidding has proceeded North East South West

1 Pass 1 NT Pass

What do you bid now?

A—Three no trump. Partners free bid of one no trump indicates a good hand which should normally measure 16 points. Your hand contains 11 which is sufficient for a game contract.

Q. 8—Both vulnerable, partner opens with one diamond and you hold

AK964 AKQ10 QJ94 AK4

What is your response?

A—Our preference is for a complete descriptive bid all at one shot. Such a bid is three no trump. This hand is evenly balanced and contains 17 points in high cards. We would therefore choose to suppress the one over one response even if it happens to be a major suit. The reason is, at even if partner happens to have four spades this hand with double stoppers in both the other suits might play just as well at no trump.

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars. For MONDAY, JANUARY 16, 1967:

ARIES (March 21 to April 20)—This should be a stimulating day, but there are two admonitions: Don't take on more than you can reasonably manage and don't fear failure. Stress personal dignity, quality.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21)—How you go about everyday matters will be the deciding point for or against top-flight attainment. Details must not be hurried over; hours not too heavily crowded.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)—Set a few rules to go by before you begin your day. It will save time and energy. Brighten routine with artistic touches; put loose ends together, tie in with successful folks.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23)—Better-than-average influences. Cooperate promptly, astutely. Let nothing of value slip through your fingers. Come forward with a revised plan or a new idea.

LEO (July 24 to August 23)—You, like Cancer, have more propitious aspects than many. But whether you use your talents smartly and close up loopholes through which advantages could slip is YOUR answer.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23)—Slow down to gather forces more compactly, to display abilities more cleverly. In discussions, hear all sides, and take a vote on procedure. Don't deviate from pre-planned activities for no good reason.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23)—Avoid hasty judgments. Look more closely at all situations. There may be values not seen at a cursory glance. This is a good period for making improvement along all lines.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. T. R. Van Dellen

OSTEOMYELITIS

Bone infections (osteomyelitis) usually begin at one end of the marrow cavity where the causative microbe is able to gain a foothold and multiply. The inflammation is confined initially to a closed space and the resultant pressure leads to intense pain and disability. X-rays at this early stage offer no clues.

Within a few days the infection begins to spread and pus forms beneath the outer shell of the bone. The purulent material may strip away the outer coating as it inches its way up and down the bone. Shortly thereafter an abscess forms or the pus ruptures out of the bone and invades the soft tissue. It is surprising how much bone becomes infected and killed by the disease before the X-ray reveals the source of the trouble.

Acute osteomyelitis usually is caused by staphylococci or streptococci. The condition often arises from a pre-existing lesion such as a boil or an ear infection; the bacteria reach the bone via the bloodstream. In others the involved area was injured previously, the trauma often being so slight it was quickly forgotten.

"A CLOTHES DRYER THAT DOES MY IRONING? RIDICULOUS!"

Show us a lady who doubts a modern Gas dryer can do most of her ironing, and we'll show you a lady who wonders why everyone's so excited about the new Permanent Press clothing.

Oh, she's tried Permanent Press. She's washed them, hung them out to dry—and gotten clothesline creases, clothespin puckers and droopy knees that still need plenty of hand ironing.

Pity. Somebody should tell her that the wonderful new Permanent Press clothing is made to be dried in an automatic dryer. Most Permanent Press labels say the garments absolutely must have gentle tumble-action to pop out the wrinkles and snap back the creases.

She should know that a Gas dryer can do most of her ironing for her. Slacks, shirts, dresses, children's clothes, sheets, pillowcases, stretch clothes, knits and dozens of other Permanent Press miracles are at her store just waiting for her to see the light. Soon she'll be able to buy everything washable in Permanent Press and retire her iron to the attic to keep the washboard company.

And somebody should let her know that penny-a-load gas dryers dry everything—Permanent Press or not—for about one-fifth what it costs to run an electric dryer. Poor lady. Somebody just has to tell her.

Will you do it? Please?

Tuition Aid Plan

The Pennsylvania Railroad has established a tuition plan for employees who seek to improve their professional and technical standing by taking courses at accredited colleges, universities and technical institutions during off-duty hours.

PRR employees with high school education and considered to have potential for growth and development within the company qualify for this program. Applications are handled by the railroad's labor relations and personnel department at system levels in Philadelphia, as well as at the regional headquarters in Chicago, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.
